Germans Rain Bombs on Four Soviet Cities; 5 Million Men at Grips on 2,000-Mile Front; Churchill Suggests U. S. Join in Aid to Russia

Prime Minister Declares Moscow an Ally of Britain; Past Fades Out, He Says, Before Sole Aim—Victory

By the Associated Press

London, June 22.—Prime Minister Churchill promised British aid to Russia in her fight against Germany tonight and strongly suggested that the United States do likewise.

In a ringing 20-minute radio address to the world, Churchill declared Britain "will give whatever help we can to Russia" and will appeal "to all our friends and allies" to take the same course.

"Russia's danger is our danger, and the danger of the United States," he cried.

"Any man or state that fights against Hitler will have our aid."

He offered to the U. S. S. R. "any technical and economic assistance" within Britain's power.

In dramatic reversal of one of the main courses of British foreign policy since the Bolshevik revolution in 1917, Churchill appealed to Britain and her new ally to "strike with united strength while life and power remain." He added:

"We shall bomb Germany by day as well as by night in ever increasing measure, casting upon them month by month a heavier dose of bombs and making the German people taste and gulp each month a sharper dose of the miseries they have showered upon mankind."

Churchill accused Hitler of intending to carry his "work of butchery and desolation" into not only Russia but Asia as a prelude to an attack on Britain and "subjugation of the Western Hemisphere."

"It is not for me to speak of the action of the United States," Churchill said, "but I will say if Hitler imagines that his attack on Soviet Russia will cause the slightest division of aid or slackening of effort in the great democracies who are resolved upon his doom, he is woefully mistaken."

The Past "Fades Away," Before Spectacle

The Prime Minister asserted:

"The Nazi regime is indistinguishable from the worst features of communism. It is devoid of all principle except appetite and racial domination. It excels in all forms of human wickedness in the efficiency of its cruel and ferocious aggression. No one has been a more consistent opponent of communism than I have for the last 25 years. I will unsay no words that I have spoken about it. But all this fades away before the spectacle which is now unfolding. The past with its crimes, its follies and its tragedies, sinks away."

Instead, Churchill pictured the poor people of Russia striving to guard their hard-won bread from the aggressor. He predicted "a famine without example in human history"—if Hitler should win.

Yet all this, Churchill said, would be "only a stepping-stone to the attempt to plunge the 400 or 500 millions who live in China and the 350 millions who live in India, into that bottomless pit of human degradation over which the diabolic emblem of the swastika flaunts itself."

This, he commented, "it is not too much to say here this summer evening that the lives and the happiness of a thousand million additional human beings are now menaced with brutal Nazi violence. This is enough to make us hold our breath."

Churchill touched briefly on Russia's alliance with Britain in the World War "against the same deadly foe," and mentioned regretfully that the Russians unhappily got no share in that victory.

"We have but One Aim"—Victory

"But now," he said, I have to declare the decision of His Majesty's government, and I feel sure it is a decision in which the great dominions will in due course concur. We must speak out now, at once, without a day's delay. I have to make the declaration. None can doubt what our policy will be.

"We have but one aim, and one single irrevocable purpose. We are resolved to destroy Hitler and every vestige of his Nazi regime; from this nothing will turn us—nothing.

"We will never parley, we will never negotiate with Hitler or any of his men. We shall fight him by land, we shall fight him by sea, we shall fight him in the air, until, with God's help, we have rid the earth of his shadow and liberated his peoples from the yoke."

Text of Churchill's Pledge To Give Full Aid to Soviet

The text of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's radio address, as transcribed by the National Broadcasting Co., follows:

I have taken occasion to speak to you tonight because we have reached one of the climacterics of the war. In the first of these intense turning points a year ago, France fell prostrate under the German hammer and we had to face the storm alone.

The second was when the Royal Air Force beat the Hun raiders out of the Channel and thus warded off the Nazi invasion of our island, while we were still ill-armed and ill-prepared.

The third turning point was when the President and Congress of the United States passed the lease and lend enactment, devoting nearly two thousand million sterling of the wealth of the new world to help us defend our liberties and their own.

Those were the three climacterics. The fourth is now upon us. At 4 o'clock this morning, Hitler attacked and invaded Russia. All his usual formalities were observed with scrupulous technique. A non-aggression treaty had been solemnly signed and was in force between the two countries. No complaint had been made by Germany of its non-fulfillment.

Under its cloak of forced confidence, the German armies drew up in immense strength along a line which stretched from the White Sea to the Black Sea, and their air fleets and armored divisions slowly and methodically took up their stations. Then suddenly, without declaration of war, without even an ultimatum, the German bombs rained down from the sky upon the Russian cities. The German troops violated the Russian frontiers and an hour later the German Ambassador, who till the night before had given assurances of friendship, almost of alliance with the Russians, called upon the Russian foreign minister to tell him that a state of war existed between Germany and Russia.

Thus was repeated on a far larger scale the same kind of outrage against another form of signed compact and international faith which we had witnessed in Norway, in Denmark, in Holland, in Belgium, and which Hitler's accomplice and jackal, Mussolini, so faithfully imitated in the case of Greece.

All this was no surprise to me. In fact I gave clear and precise warnings to Stalin of what was coming. I gave him warnings, as I have given warnings to others before. I can only hope that these warnings did not

Pat Harrison, New Deal Leader, Dies

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, died at 6:35 a. m. yesterday in Emergency Hospital at the age of 59. At his bedside were his wife, Mary Edwina McInnis Harrison, and his son, Pat Harrison, jr.

The tall, genial Mississippian, beloved in Congress for 30 years, was president pro tempore of the Senate, chairman of its powerful Finance Committee, and a wheel horse in the Administration's national defense program. From the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration, Harrison, like the late Senator Joseph Robinson of Arkansas, and Senator Joe Byrnes of South Carolina, was a leader and manager of New Deal legislation.

The President, Secretary of State Cordell Hull and many of his associates during his 30 years in Congress issued statements of regret.

Some of his friends suggested a state funeral. Senator Harrison's office, however, issued a statement saying "the entire family, knowing the Senator's love of simplicity, desires only a simple service. Mrs. Harrison deeply appreciates the flowers sent by President and Mrs. Roosevelt as well as those from other friends and the many messages of condolence that have come in."

Body to Lie in State

Instead, the body will lie in state in the Senate Chamber from 2 p. m. until 6 p. m. today.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday in Gulfport, Miss., the Senator's home. A special train will leave Washington at 3 a. m. tomorrow. The entire Senate membership has been invited to accompany the body. Services, at the Gulfport Methodist Church, will be conducted by its pastor, the Rev. Dan Lundrum, assisted by Dr. J. N. Brown, a Presbyterian minister.

The President's statement, elaborating on Senator Harrison's career, said:

"First as a member of the House and afterward for more than 20 years as a Senator his exceptional talents won increasing recognition, rewarded in successive posts of great responsibility. It was as natural as it was fitting that he should finally attain the chairmanship of the great Committee on Finance and that his colleagues should, in due course, as another tribute to his

Navy Pays Final Tributes to 33 Entombed in O-9

By International News Service

Portsmouth, N. H., June 22.—The United States Navy paid full tribute late today to 33 hero officers and men who will forever have the sunken submarine O-9 as a tomb and the ocean as a grave.

As a bright sun shone down on the ocean over the lost submersible, high-ranking Navy officials led memorial services for the men who went down with their ship in a disastrous plunge of 438 feet to the bottom of the Atlantic, off the Isles of Shoals, last Friday.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and Rear Admiral Richard S. Edwards of the Portsmouth Navy Yard joined with other Navy officials in paying last homage to the O-9's crew. A few hours before the Navy had announced that because no hope remained that the entombed crew were alive, and because of the insurmountable odds facing even the most intrepid of divers, salvage operations would be discontinued. The announcement followed the report of two divers who reached the O-9 today and found the submarine crushed.

World Rule Declared Proved as Nazi Aim

(Communists Say Hitler's Drive Perils United States, Page 6.)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Germany's attack on Russia ought to prove beyond all doubt that Adolf Hitler plans domination over every country in the world, it was said yesterday in State Department circles.

The Nazi onslaught, it was further stated, was another evidence that Hitler's word was worthless; that a nonaggression pact simply provided Germany with an opportunity, if and when she desired, to attack the other party to the pact.

Government officials remained tight-lipped over the question of whether the United States would list Russia as a victim of aggression and extend her aid under the Lease-Lend Act.

Prime Minister Churchill, in announcing that Great Britain would give whatever help it could to Russia, appealed "to all our friends and allies in every part of the world to take the same course." There was no doubt here that Churchill's appeal embraced the United States.

Two points of view on this question were quickly discerned in Congressional circles. One was that the United States ought to forget Russia's own record of betrayal and aggression and give her aid; the other was that the United States ought to remain aloof and regard the Nazi-Soviet war as a dog-eat-dog contest.

President Roosevelt, it was said at the White House, spent much of his time at the telephone during the Sabbath, but whether he talked to Prime Minister Churchill was not made known.

Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, called at the State De-

Nazi Move Puts Tokyo Leaders Into Dilemma

Japanese Press' Tone Is Cautious As Officials Confer

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Monday), June 23.—Japan's highest officials held important conferences today obviously on the dilemma that confronted this nation since Germany and Italy, its Axis partners, went to war against Russia, Japan's new treaty friend.

Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye met with Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka who previously had conferred with Emperor Hirohito. Matsuoka also talked for an hour with Maj. Gen. Eugen Ott, German Ambassador.

An urgent conference of the cabinet and military leaders was postponed for six hours.

The vernacular newspapers almost unanimously concluded that Japan's future course must be based on her own strength. One commentator said the Japanese can now see how unreliable international treaties are and that reliance must be put only upon the nation.

Observers noted objective handling of the news and the lack of speculation on the attitude of the Japanese government in Japanese newspapers. Some neutral sources suggested a parallel in the Russian-German conflict with the China affair, for Russia's vast territory

Enemy Gains 'Insignificant,' Moscow Says

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Monday, June 23.—Russian troops repulsed the German forces with heavy losses yesterday, but the Nazis have succeeded in advancing toward Grodno and Kristinopol, the Red army high command announced today in the first communique of the new war.

Grodno is about 150 miles northeast of the former Polish capital of Warsaw, now in German hands. Kristinopol is on the Bug River about 40 miles almost due north of Lwow in southern Poland.

German troops occupied the villages of Kalvaria, Stoyanuv and Tsekmanovets in Russian territory —an advance of about 10 miles.

Russian antiaircraft artillery and fighter planes shot down 65 German planes, the high command communique said.

The Germans attacked Russian frontier troops all the way from the Baltic Sea to the Black Sea.

In the first half-day of fighting they were held back. After fierce fighting yesterday afternoon the Germans succeeded in gaining ground.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HOSTILITIES BEGIN—Rumanian troops, acting as allies of Germany, crossed the Prut River yesterday and occupied Bolgrad (1) in the former Rumanian province of Bessarabia, in what appeared to be the first advance by land troops in the Russo-German war. German air raids were reported to have caused 200 casualties at Sevastopol (2), Russian Black Sea naval base; Kiev and Zhitomir (3) and Kaunas (4). Berlin claims to have turned back an air raid on East Prussia

Red Airforce Beaten Off, Berlin Says

Enemy Airfields And Tank Columns Ripped by Bombs, Germans Report

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Monday), June 23.—Smashing air assaults on the Russian Black Sea base of Sevastopol and destruction of at least 40 Soviet bombers trying counterraids against German positions were claimed by Germany today as notable first thrusts of the great new war Adolf Hitler declared at dawn Sunday against Russia.

Bolstered by vengeful Finland and Rumania, the might of the German army was loosed against the Soviet Union on a 2,000-mile front ranging from the Black Sea to the wastes of the Arctic north—a battle zone which the Germans said at the outset was the most extensive continuous line in the history of warfare. There began a struggle of at least 5,000,000 men.

First official news, delivered by D. N. B., official German news agency, dealt almost entirely with war in the air.

Airports, Barracks Hit

In less than 24 hours, D. N. B. said, the Luftwaffe smashed hard at Sevastopol, which was occupied by German troops [illegible] 1, 1918, near the close of the World War; destroyed numerous Russian airports, hangars and barracks all along the line; destroyed unnumbered Russian planes on the ground, and smashed columns of Red army tanks, railroads and munitions stores with bombs of all calibers.

The Russians tried at least twice to raid the Germans, D. N. B. said. The first attempt, directed against East Prussia, cost them seven out of nine attacking bombers, while the second, in the general government area of former Poland, saw 33 of 35 Soviet bombers destroyed, D. N. B. claimed. The full Soviet losses are not yet determined, it added.

Baltic Attack Opened

At sea, in "Russian waters," D. N. B. said German speedboats sank a 4,000-ton Russian freighter and a fishing boat.

The first military communique was issued from the German-Rumanian front in the south, stating that these allies had joined battle with the Russians from the mountains of Bucovina to the shores of the Black Sea.

(This indicates a 250-mile battle-front in that region alone.

'Information received by military circles in Vichy, France, indicated the main German thrust probably was being made in that area, directed toward Kharkov, about 500 miles distant in the center of the Ukraine wheat fields.

(Other Vichy reports said another German attack was started some-

Airforce Too Small For 2-Front Blitz, Hitler Indicates

An intimation that Germany does not have enough airplanes to conduct extensive raids on Britain while fighting Russia was contained in Adolf Hitler's proclamation of war on the Reds yesterday.

Speaking of the concentration of great Russian military strength along the German border, Hitler said:

"Thus, there occurred the effect, intended by the British and Soviet Russia's operation, namely, the finding of such powerful German forces in the East that a radical conclusion of the war in the West, particularly as regards aircraft, could no longer be vouched for by the German supreme command."

The movement of German strength against the Russian threat seemingly accounts for the decline in raiding of the British Isles by the Luftwaffe this month.

Budapest Traps Reds

New York, June 22 (AP).—The Berlin radio reported today that Russian embassy members in Budapest had tried to leave Hungary secretly in automobiles, but were stopped by police

Nazis Make Slight Gains, Paying Dearly, Moscow Says; Kiev and Kharkov Raided, Thrust at Ukraine Begun

By the Associated Press

Germany's dawn-sprung onslaught, on a 2,000-mile line from the northern Baltic through the Balkans, forced the massive Red army back in the first day's fighting, but the Russians declared today the gains were small and costly.

The Red army's first communique of the war declared the Nazis were stopped in their tracks with heavy losses during the first half-day of attacks, but by nightfall Sunday they had made advances of about 10 miles into Soviet territory.

The Russians said Hitler's forces were attacking along the entire front, but the principal Nazi gains the Russians mentioned apparently were part of a drive northeast from East Prussia into Lithuania, now Soviet-guarded, and east into Soviet-occupied eastern Poland.

The Russians said the Germans moved into the villages of Kalvaria, Stoyanuv and Tshemanovets and were pushing toward Grodno and Kristinopol. The communique indicated that the Red army—expected to give some ground in order to fight from a firmer defense line deeper in its own territory—still was determined to take a fighting toll of the Nazi advance.

Russia's warplanes were in the fight, too, and the Moscow communique claimed 65 German aircraft shot down during the first day of aerial combat.

40 Russian Bombers Reported Shot Down

Germany claimed quick and destructive success by air for the thunderbolts which Adolf Hitler loosed Sunday in a declaration of war on his one-time friend, the Russia of Josef Stalin.

The 2,000-mile battlefront, from the Arctic to the Black Sea, was lined with 5,000,000 fighting men—the might of Red Russia arrayed against that of Germany and of Germany's new allies, Finland and Rumania. Britain's Prime Minister Winston Churchill quickly offered Russia all technical and economic aid that Britain could give and suggested that the United States might do the same.

It was, in scope and in its meaning for the world, the climactic development of perhaps the greatest war in history.

Primary news from the fronts dealt almost exclusively with air raids. D. N. B., official German news agency, and the German radio told of strong assaults on Sevastopol, Russian Black Sea base; on Kiev, capital of the rich Ukrainian wheat region; on Kharkov, rail center, and Zhitomir, also in the Ukraine, and on Kaunas, capital of the old Lithuania which Russia seized last year.

Hit in return was the Finnish port of Alskar, and D. N. B. said the Russians lost 40 big bombers when they made two futile raids on East Prussia and the general government area of former Poland.

The Germans claimed destruction of a Russian freighter of 4,000 tons by German speedboats in "Russian waters"—otherwise unidentified—and a communique said the German-Rumanian force was in action along the 250-mile front from the Bucovina Mountains to the Black Sea.

Hapless Finland, weary from her 1939-40 war with Russia, but dragged into this new clash of great powers along with Rumania as an ally of Germany, suffered some of the first of Russia's counter-blows.

The Finnish high command told of Russian air raids at several points, including Alskar, and of attacks on two Finnish armored vessels.

But the Finnish press, making the best of matters, printed flaming dispatches comparing German successes in the first day of the titanic conflict with the biggest victories in the course of the entire European war.

The smoke of burning Russian towns and oil and munitions dumps delineated the sprawling border, these stories said.

Italy joined her Axis partner in declaring war on Russia, but her role appeared to be that of a stand-by for the present, at least.

Turkey remained officially neutral but Foreign Minister Saracoglu announced a commercial treaty with Germany would be concluded quickly as an afterpiece to the nonaggression pact with the Reich signed last Monday.

Tokyo Actions Indicate Japan Will Stand Aside

Axis sources reported that Rumanian and German troops—whose specific job was to regain the provinces of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina which Hitler had permitted Stalin to take—had driven across the Soviet frontier on the southern flank, occupying the Bessarabian town of Bolgrad.

French military circles in Vichy were informed that the main Nazi thrust was against Kharkov, in the center of Russia's Ukraine.

The initial maneuvers in Tokyo indicated that Japan, although a mem-

Text of Churchill Talk Pledging Aid to Russia

fall unheeded. All we know at present is that the Russian people are defending their native soil and that their leaders have called upon them to resist to the utmost.

Hitler is a monster of wickedness, insatiable in his lust for blood and plunder. Not content with having all Europe under his heel to terrorize into various forms of abject submission, he must now carry his work of butchery and desolation among the vast multitude of Russia and of Asia.

The terrible military machine which we and the rest of the civilized world so foolishly, so supinely, so insensately, allowed the Nazi gangsters to build up, year by year, from almost nothing—this machine cannot stand idle lest it rust, or fall to pieces. It must be in continual motion, grinding up human lives and trampling down the homes and the rights of hundreds of millions of men.

Moreover, it must be fed, not only with flesh but with blood. So now this blood-thirsty guttersnipe must launch his mechanized armies upon new fields of slaughter, pillage and devastation. Poor as are the Russian peasants, workmen and soldiers, he must steal from them their daily bread. He must devour their harvests. He must rob them of the oil which drives their plows, and thus produce a famine without example in human history, and even the carnage and ruin which his victory, should he gain it—he has not gained it yet—will bring upon the Russian people shall in itself be only a stepping stone to the attempt to plunge the 400 or 500 millions who live in China and the 350 millions who live in India, into that bottomless pit of human degradation over which the diabolic emblem of the Swastika flouts itself.

It is not too much t say here this summer evening that the lives and the happiness of a thousand million additional human beings are now menaced with brutal Nazi violence. This is enough to make us hold our breath. But presently I shall show you something else that lies behind and something that touches very nearly the life of Britain and of the United States.

The Nazi regime is indistinguishable from the worst features of Communism. It is devoid of all principle except appetite and racial domination. It excels in all forms of human wickedness, in the efficiency of its cruelty and ferocious aggression. No one has been a more consistent opponent of Communism than I have for the last 25 years. I will unsay no words that I have spoken about it. But all this fades away before the spectacle which is now unfolding. The past with its crimes, its follies and its tragedies ashes away.

Pictures Horror Facing Russians

I see Russian soldiers standing on the threshold of their native land guarding the fields which their fathers have tilled from time immemorial. I see them guarding their homes, where mothers and wives pray. Ah, yes, for there are times when all pray for the safety of their loved ones, for the return of the breadwinner, of the champion, of their protector. I see the 10,000 villages in Russia where the means of existence is wrung so hardly from the soil, but where there are still primordial human joys, where maidens laugh and children play. I see advancing upon this invidious onslaught the Nazi war machine, with its clanging, heel-clicking, dandified Prussian officers, its crafty expert agents, fresh from the cutting down and cowing down of a dozen countries. I see also the dull, drilled, docile, brutish masses of the Hun soldiery coming on like a swarm of crawling locusts. I see the German bombers and fighters in the sky, still smarting from many a British whipping, and they are likely to find, they believe, an easier and safer prey.

Behind all this storm, I see that small group of venomous men who planned, organized and launched this cataract of horrors upon mankind. Then my mind goes back across the years to the days when the Russian armies were our allies against the same deadly foe, when they fought with so much valor and constancy and helped to gain a victory, from a share in which, alas, they were, through no fault of ours, utterly cut out.

I lived all through this and you will pardon me if I express my feelings and the stir of old memories.

But now I have to declare the decision of His Majesty's government and I feel sure it is a decision in which the great dominions will in due course concur. We must speak out now, at once, without a day's delay. I have to make the declaration.

None can doubt what our policy will be. We have but one aim, and one single irrevocable purpose. We are resolved to destroy Hitler and every vestige of his Nazi regime; from this nothing will turn us—nothing. We will never parley, we will never negotiate with Hitler or any of his men. We shall fight him by land, we shall fight him by sea, we shall fight him in the air, until, with God's help, we have rid the earth of his shadow and liberated his peoples from the yoke.

Any man or state who fights against Nazism will have our aid. Any man or state who marches with Hitler is our foe. This applies not only to organized states but to all representatives of that vile race of Quislings who make themselves the tools and agents of the Nazi regime against their fellow countrymen and against the lands of their birth. These Quislings, like the Nazi leaders themselves, if not disposed of by their fellow countrymen, which would save trouble, will be delivered to us on the morrow of victory to the justice of the Allied tribunals.

Pledges Increased Bombing of Reich

That is our policy and that is our declaration. It follows, therefore, that we shall give whatever help we can to Russia and to the Russian people. We shall appeal to all our friends and Allies in every part of the world to take the same course and pursue it as we shall, painfully and steadfastly to the end.

We have offered to the government of Soviet Russia any technical or economic assistance which is in our power and which is likely to be of service to them. We shall bomb Germany by day as well as by night in ever-increasing measure, casting upon them month by month a heavier discharge of bombs and making the German people taste and gulp each month a sharper dose of the miseries they have showered upon mankind.

It is noteworthy that only yesterday the Royal Air Force fighting inland over France, cut down, with great honor to themselves, 28 Hun fighting machines in the air above the French soil they invaded, defiled and professed to hold. But this is only a beginning. From now hence forward, the main expansion of our air force proceeds with gathering speed. In another six months the weight of the help we are receiving from the United States in war materials of all kinds, especially in heavy bombers, will begin to tell.

This is no class war; this is a war in which the whole British Empire and Commonwealth of Nations is engaged without distinction of race, creed or party. It is not for me to speak of the action of the United States, but I will say if Hitler imagines that his attack on Soviet Russia will cause the slightest division of aid or slackening of effort in the great democracies who are resolved upon his doom, he is woefully mistaken. On the contrary, we shall be fortified and encouraged in our efforts to rescue mankind from his tyranny. We shall be strengthened and not weakened in our determination and in our resources.

This is no time to moralize upon the policies of countries and governments which have allowed themselves to be struck down one by one, when by united action they could so easily have saved themselves and saved the world from this catastrophe; but when I spoke a few minutes ago of Hitler's blood lust and the hateful appetites which have impelled or lured him on his Russian adventure, I said there was one deeper motive behind this outrage. He wishes to destroy the Russian power because he hopes that if he succeeds in this, he will be able to bring back the main strength of his army and air force from the East and hurl it upon this island, which he knows he must conquer or suffer the penalty of his crimes.

Prelude to Attempt to Invade Britain

His invasion of Russia is no more than a prelude to an attempted invasion of the British Isles. He hopes, no doubt, that all this may be accomplished before the winter comes. And if he can overwhelm Great Britain before the fleets and air power of the United States might intervene, he hopes that he may once again repeat upon a greater scale than ever before that process of destroying his enemies one by one, by which he has so long thrived and prospered, and that then the scene will be clear for the final act without which all his conquests would be in vain; namely, the subjugation of the Western Hemisphere to his will and to his system.

"The Russian danger is, therefore, our danger and the danger of the United States, just as the cause of any Russian fighting for his hearth and home is the cause of free men and free people in every quarter of the globe. Let us learn the lessons already taught by such cruel experience. Let us redouble our exertions and strike with united strength while life and power remain.

Soviet Is No. 11 To Feel Hitler's Blitz

The Soviet Union is the eleventh nation invaded by German armies since May, 1939. Germany conquered the others in campaigns lasting from 10 hours to 39 days. The roll call:

Czecho-Slovakia, invaded May 14, 1939; conquest completed, May 18, 1939.

Poland, invaded September 1, 1939; conquest completed, September 28, 1939.

Denmark, invaded April 9, 1940; conquest completed 11 hours later.

Norway, invaded April 9, 1940; conquest completed, May 3.

The Netherlands, invaded May 10, 1940; conquest completed, May 14.

Belgium, invaded May 10, 1940; conquest completed, May 28.

Luxembourg, invaded May 10, 1940; conquest completed 10 hours later.

France, invaded May 14, 1940; conquest completed, June 22, 1940.

Yugoslavia, invaded April 6, 1941; conquest completed April 28, 1941.

Greece, invaded April 6, 1941; Soviet Union, invaded June 22, 1941.

Russian Women Drill for Gas Attack

partment to confer with Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State. The British envoy would not talk for direct quotation but he indicated that he regarded the Nazi-Soviet conflict as a development of tremendous importance. He said that it should cause no let-down in British-American efforts against Hitler, but on the contrary should intensify those efforts.

Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who often has been a Capitol Hill herald of Administration moves, advocated United States aid to Soviet Russia. He echoed Churchill in saying that the destruction of Hitlerism was the No. 1 objective, and declared that a German conquest of Russia would remove the last threat to Hitler in Europe and enable him to be "clutching at our very shores in his own policy of encircling us."

"Our policy," he continued, "is to defend America against Hitler, and to help all others—Britain, China, Greece, Russia or any other people who will help fend Hitler off. We will play into Hitler's hands if we let ourselves be divided by our hates. Let us think of those who help us and help them to help us."

The other viewpoint was expressed by Senator Henrik Shipstead (Republican), of Minnesota, a member of the noninterventionist group. Referring to the Nazi-Soviet clash, he asked:

"Does this mean that the Russian army will march with the democracies singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers" for freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from fear and freedom from want?"

This was a thrust at President Roosevelt's "four freedoms" which he hoped to see guaranteed in the postwar world.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, who long ago urged that the United States Navy be used to "shoot the hell out of the Nazis," probably came nearer to voicing the wish of the average American yesterday. He said he hoped that Hitler, like Napoleon, would meet with disaster in Russia.

"I hope it means," he said, "that Russia will keep Germany occupied on that end while Britain defeats him on the other end."

Napoleon, it was pointed out by military men, invaded Russia in June, but was still trying to engage the Russians when the cold weather arrived. The experts expected Hitler to wage a typical blitzkrieg in an effort to end the Russian campaign quickly. They predicted that his chief aim, as usual, would be to smash the Red army by enveloping it in a series of "bags," at the same time paralyzing its ability to fight by seizing the wheat of the Ukraine and the oil of the Caucasus.

Germany Greatly Exceeds Russia In Air Personnel

America's defense program and her aid-to-Britain program.

For more than 1,000 hours, men and women representing an alleged Communist-front organization picketed the White House. Sailors representing the Communist-controlled National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) carried placards saying: "Do you want your son eaten by sharks? No convoys."

The pickets were withdrawn from in front of the White House a few hours before Hitler drew his sword against Stalin.

After the strike at North American Aircraft plant, branded as Communist-inspired by both Government and C. I. O. officials, there was talk of a "purge" of Communists holding high positions in the C. I. O.

Germany's attack on Russia was regarded as a "break" for them, since they are now expected to go all out in calling for the defeat of Hitler.

Difficulty in Moving Aid

If the United States should decide to make Russia a beneficiary of the Lend-Lease Act, it was believed, it could hardly be more than a gesture of moral support. About the only way to get supplies to her would be by way of the Pacific to Vladivostok, and here Japan's attitude might have to be taken into consideration.

Right now Great Britain is claiming about all the weapons and supplies that the United States can spare, and besides there is the problem growing out of the scarcity of ships.

Rarely has any event stirred up so much comment on Capitol Hill as much comment on Capitol Hill as Senator Pepper, in calling for aid to Russia, said:

"This new move by Germany certainly makes the situation clearer and the menace to us greater. It shows that the Nazis have finally assaulted a major power with which it had a negotiated peace agreement.

"Russian now stands between Hitler and us. Hitler is marching this way. If Russia collapse and Hitler moves on, eventually he wil come to Russian fortifications which are relatively a few miles from American possessions.

Sees U. S. Encirclement Peril

"It is clearly a policy of encircling the United States. If they win this case it will give them a chance to make a common cause with Japan on the other rim of its system and to tighten the jaws of the nutcracker around the Western Hemisphere. If there was any doubt as to the worthlessness of a negotiated peace when it is negotiated with Germany, this ought to be convincing."

Senator Shipstead said that the new development might prolong the war 10 or 15 years.

"I assume," he said, "that Germany can get the food, oil and minerals she needs and then just sit there. It makes the danger of our involvement ten times worse."

Senator Walter George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that the Russo-German war hadn't developed far enough to justify any accurate forecasting. But he made a casual surmise that it might develop along lines of considerable magnitude and duration.

"It stands to reason," he said, "that with Germany occupied with Russia, Great Britain will be given additional and perhaps unexpected time to strengthen her defenses, and that we can give additional aid to Britain. Germany needs Russia's wheat and oil in order to continue her conquests."

Clark Cool on Aid

Other comment:

Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, member of the Foreign Relations Committee and a leading Congressional isolationist:

"I would regard with abhorrence the idea of throwing the United States into the arms of Communist Russia. I regard Stalin as fully a bloody-handed murderer as Hitler. This was one of the dangers I feared when the lend-lease bill was under consideration."

Representative Luther A. Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, second ranking majority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee:

"The incident proves three things: That Hitler's lust for power is lust for world domination; that Hitler has no regard for treaties or the pledged word; that Hitler must be stopped because he is the enemy of civilization."

Fish Joins Opponents

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee:

"The American people, especially mothers, do not want to send their sons to fight and die in Soviet Russia for communism, the red flag and Joseph Stalin, under the guise of democracy. My suggestion is that if American Communists want to fight for communism in Russia, that we provide them with free transportation to Moscow without a return ticket. I also suggest the same treatment for Nazis, Fascists and other alien agitators.

"There's no room in this country for any foreign forms of dictatorship. Over 80 per cent of the people are determined not to enter any European or Asiatic war. They are doubly decided not to fight for communism in Russia or anywhere."

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana: "I hope and believe the war between Germany and Russia means the beginning of the end of Hitler and Hitlerism. I hope it will be a war of extermination of both of them."

May Sees Quick Nazi Victory

Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee: "I think it will take Germany from 60 to 90 days to beat Russia. It will give us just that much more time to help England. The consoling factor is that it will take up much of Germany's resources to beat Russia."

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah: "Hitler will be successful in Russia. This puts the great unknown now in the Far East. I believe Japan will now modify her antagonistic attitude toward this country."

"No comment!" was the response last night from Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan; Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of North Carolina; Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, all members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Test of Communists' Hold

A Nazi victory in Russia, many observers believed, would mean the end of communism as a force in the world. Dictator Josef Stalin's policy up until now, experts on Russia have said, was based on a "monstrous fear" of Hitler, a fear of losing both his job and his head, if Hitler ever struck.

The Communist Party, though it rules Russia, actually has only a small percentage of the Russians within its ranks, something like 4,000,000 out of a population of 180,000,000.

The German invasion will be a test of the Communists' hold on Russia. Some students would not be surprised to see revolts within the country and attempts to "liquidate" Stalin as the Red Czar has liquidated so many thousands of his own countrymen in his ruthless efforts to hold to power.

"Party Line" Shift Expected

Government officials and others here—particularly labor union leaders—were expecting the Communist Party "line" in the United States to undergo a sensational change. The Communists have been denouncing the war as an "imperialist" war and trying to obstruct ing general mobilization order, which will provide upwards of 5,000,000 men for the army which Marshal Semyon Timoshenko will lead into battle, the International News Service said.

[All men between the ages of 23 and 36 were summoned for immediate service.]

Moscow, June 22 (U.P.).—Moscow was blacked out against German air raids tonight as workers and soldiers rallied to the fight against the Nazi invasion and passed ringing resolutions in mass meetings promising to "dispatch Hitler to hell."

Russia sprang to arms under a government mandate to "beat back the bandit attack" by Russia's partner in a nonaggression pact signed for a 10-year period in 1939.

Gas-masked policemen appeared in the streets of the capital late today after German bombs already had killed or wounded 200 persons in four western cities. They directed traffic and carefully checked up to see that blackout restrictions were observed.

Air raid wardens took up posts in all dwellings, offices and government buildings. Red Cross stations were established to care for victims of bombings.

Typical of the resolutions passed by hundreds of factories and towns was that of Moscow's Kaganovich ball bearing plant.

"The bloodthirsty Fascists have attacked the sacred borders of the socialist fatherland. We will spare no efforts to insure victory over the accursed Fascists and dispatch Hitler and his cohorts to hell."

Aside from the mass meetings and crowds around the loudspeakers listening to the proclamation of Foreign Commissar Molotov telling of the German attack, Moscow presented its normal Sunday appearance.

German, Rumanian, Italian and Finnish diplomats remained at their homes or legations without being molested. No extra guards were posted, nor were their telephone connections disturbed. It was understood that the German Embassy offered shelter to the Czecho-Slovak citizens here, but the majority of them refused.

The assault by Germany was denounced officially as "treachery unprecedented in the history of civilized peoples." At the same time the proclamation with which Adolf Hitler initiated the war was called "a pure lie and provocation" and the Soviet Union asserted a determination to drive out the invaders.

In a radio speech announcing the attack, Molotov called on his millions of countrymen to rally around the Red banners and in a ringing challenge to "the clique of bloody Fascist rulers of Germany" declared:

"Our cause is right. The enemy will be crushed. Victory will be ours."

In sharp contrast to the calm indifference of the Russians, foreign diplomats were in a state of jitters. Several weeks ago most of the wives and children of German diplomats and journalists had slipped quietly out of the capital.

Last week a wholesale exodus of Italian women and various Axis satellites develope. American Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt had been preparing for any emergency. Mrs. Steinhardt and their daughter, Dulcy Ann, flew to Stockholm. Two other wives of embassy officers were leaving for Teheran.

Molotov's radio speech was made on behalf of the Soviet government and Josef Stalin. He said that never once in the life of the German-Russian nonaggression pact, signed a few days before the German invasion of Poland, had Germany found occasion to complain of Soviet observance.

"All responsibility for this bandit attack against the Soviet Union wholly and fully falls on the German Fascist rulers," Molotov said.

ber of the Axis alliance, would stay out of the fighting.

Sweden broadcast instructions to all ships at sea to return at once to Swedish ports—the sort of direction that usually is given by a power about to become a belligerent.

Spain made it clear that she sympathized with Germany.

The German attack, it seemed, was intended to seize the Russian productive areas most vital to Germany's continuation of the war against Britain—the Ukraine wheat lands and the southern Russian oil fields.

No one of the great imponderables raised was more significant than the question as just how closely Britain would cooperate with the Soviet.

There was one straw in the wind: Ivan Maisky, the Russian Ambassador to London, emerged smiling broadly from a talk with Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary.

There was much speculation as to whether the Russians would prove to have what they have often claimed—the world's largest air force, of 30,000 pilots and 100,000 parachute troops.

This air force, according to the available information, was based deep in the Russian interior. In the south, the Russian first line of artillery was massed along the Dniester River at the former Rumanian-Russian border.

London understood that the grand plan of the Soviet army was to smash at the center of Germany while the Nazis advanced through the Unkraine and Finland.

In announcing his campaign against the Soviet, Hitler appeared almost relieved at the final break in what had been an extraordinary alliance between communism and nazism.

He accused the Russians of violating the common German-Soviet frontier in eastern Europe; of plotting with England against the Reich.

He said, almost in so many words, that to appear friendly with the Communists had been an unwelcome task for him, and he made plain that many recent Soviet advances—including the seizure of Rumanian and Baltic territory—had been hard for him to swallow.

For the Russians, the foreign Commissar V. Molotov accused the Nazis of a cynical aggression. Moscow was active in calling for public unity and all Russians were reminded that Napoleon, too, had sought to conquer Russia.

For the first time, the Moscow radio broadcast President Roosevelt's sharp denunciation of the Germans as international outlaws—a denunciation made three days ago.

Eden Asks Envoy What Help Soviet Needs; Air and Naval Aid Considered

R. A. F. Likely To Lend Hand In Balkans

By the United Press

London, June 22.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden today assured Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to Britain, that Britain is ready to give all possible help to Russia in the war against Germany, reliable British sources reported tonight.

These sources said Eden, long an advocate of a Russian reconciliation, had assured the hastily summoned Maisky that Britain not only will continue the prosecute the war, but will intensify its drive.

It was reported reliably that Sir Stafford Cripps, British Ambassador to Moscow who returned here recently to report, would go back to the Soviet Union shority.

It was understood that Eden asked what assistance Russia requires against the German invasion, and that Maisky conveyed the inquiry to Moscow.

Oumansky Telephones

Constantine A. Oumansky, Soviet Ambassador to the United States, telephoned Maisky this afternoon and discussed with him the German-Soviet war, and particularly British and American reaction to it, it was learned.

What practical help Moscow would expect from Britain still was unknown, but it was understood that the Soviets would not call for British troops, planes or other armaments to be sent to Russia.

It would not be considered surprising, however, if the Russians sought the assistance of the British navy.

Same observers believed Moscow would like to have British aerial assistance in the Balkans and the Near East, especially against Rumania.

It was assumed that Moscow would look to the United States rather than Britain for economic aid, and would hope to get United States machine tools and among other materials, copper and iridium.

The Eden-Maisky talk was described as "satisfactory."

Conspiracy Denied

Hitler's charge that Russia and Britain had engaged in surreptitious negotiations against Germany was dismissed as "arrant nonsense." It was said authoritatively that Britain does not regard herself as at war with Finland.

A change in British left-wing attitude had its first pronouncement in a statement by Denis N. Pritt, leftist member of Parliament and one of the leaders of the People's Convention.

"If Britain and the United States will fight the Nazis with all their power," he said, "this new move will be the end of fascism and the beginning of a decent world in which men can live in peace."

New Line

Berlin Radio Turns Its Fire on Soviet

New York, June 22 (AP).—N. B. C.'s short wave listening post noted a new opening line today on the Berlin radio broadcasts.

Formerly it was: "England has declared war! Germany's victory will end this once and for all!"

Now it's: "German forces will save Europe and the world from Bolshevik clutches."

July 1 Registrants May Choose Their Own Draft Board

Men registering for Selective Service on July 1 who have more than one place of residence may choose the one they want recorded and thus determine the local board that will have jurisdiction over them, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District director, stated today.

Then new registration cards will provide additional space for listing a mail address, the General added, which may be the same as the place of residence or may be another address where the registrant would receive his mail more readily.

Although stating that these men might list their own choice of residence without interference from a registrar, he warned that once the original jurisdiction of a particular local board had been established by the listed place of residence, such jurisdiction could not be changed under any circumstances.

Vichy Forces In Syria Face Encirclement

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, June 2.—The main bulk of the army of Gen. Henri Fernand Dentz, the French high commissioner for the mandated territories in Syria and Lebanon, today faced encirclement by the Allied forces after a British column fighting its way west from Iraq entered the important central town of Palmyra this afternoon.

It is not yet known whether Palmyra has been occupied, the Beirut radio merely reporting that defending forces have established contact with British motorized units at that point.

Palmyra is one of the most important French air bases in the Levant and is the last real French defense position on the high road westward to Homs, the principal railroad junction.

If the Allies take Homs the undeclared war in Syria and Lebanon would be virtually over and north Syria and Aleppo completely cut off from south Syria and Lebanon.

In the meantime the Allied forces in Damascus have pressed beyond the city and are fighting the Vichy French at new positions to the north and the east. Beirut claims they are reorganizing their defense lines in that region. A French motorized counterattack on that sector was repelled. The Beirut radio says the advancing British are being heavily bombed by the French air force, which recently has been reinforced.

Latest reports of British military circles here stated that fighting was going on at the innermost defense positions outside Beirut and responsible informants predicted the fall of that city at the latest by Wednesday and the end of the entire campaign soon.

3 Killed in U. S. Bomber Crashes

Mountville, Ga., June 22 (AP).—A light Army bomber which a witness said "nose dived out of a dark cloud during a terrific thunderstorm" killed its three occupants today when it crashed in a swamp.

The Savannah (Ga.) Air Base late tonight identified the victims as Second Lieut. Stratford L. Morton of Clayton, Mo., pilot; Capt. Henry Walter Herlong, of Jacksonville, Fla., base ordnance officer, and Private Thomas A. Sims, of Huttig, Ark.

R.A.F. Bags 30 Planes in Nazi Home Grounds

By the Associated Press

London, June 22.—While giving the German invasion bases in France no letup, the R. A. F. destroyed 30 German planes over the English Channel and France yesterday at the loss of only two British fighters, it was announced officially. The pilot of one of these is safe.

Revised reports from R. A. F. headquarters said 29 German planes were shot down by fighters and one by a Blenheim bomber after it was damaged by fighters.

The air ministry news service said yesterday's score brought the fighter command's daylight bag for the last seven days to 98 German aircraft against a loss of 19 British pilots. It added that of 58 planes downed in the last two days many were of the new ME-109 type.

Most of the fighter command pilots who took part in the operations spoke on their return of the lack of spirit shown by German pilots, the survivor said.

Squadrons which acted as escorts to bombers on the way to targets and back saw 50 Messerschmitts as they were returning to the coast. Although they outnumbered the British they attempted no concerted attack, one squadron leader said.

Most of the German aircraft shot down were over enemy territory, the service said.

An air-raid alarm sounded in London early today. It was the first alert in nine days.

Red Airforce Beaten Back, Germans Say

where in the Baltic area, as part of Moscow.)

Of land action, the principal early reports were in German radio accounts direct from the unidentified fronts by army reporters with microphones. One of these men described in excited tones an infantry advance across the border into a small Russian village, the capture of the Russian barracks and the seizure of prisoners.

Steady Luftwaffe raids on the Russians also were given direct-from-the-scene treatment.

Politically, the war against Russia was a complete about-face by Germany since she signed a non-aggression treaty with the Soviets August 23, 1939, just before Germany went to war with Britain and France over Poland.

Justification of today's action was offered by Adolf Hitler, in a proclamation to the German people, and by Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop in a note to the Russian government in which they argued that Russia had violated the non-aggression agreement.

Aggressions Charged

Against Russia's "aggressions," including alleged cases of military violation of German borders, Hitler and von Ribbentrop said the Reich was finally obliged to act.

The German leaders said Germany had viewed with great reluctance Russian movements against the Baltic states, Finland and finally against Rumania. Germany, they said, had yielded point after point in the interests of peace.

In the far north the Finns, smarting from defeat in a well-fought war against Russia, were represented as eager for vengeance and recovery of war-lost territory. Rumania's grudge was just as bitter, as the case is represented here.

Thus, with Russia subject to attack in the north by Finland, in the central sector by the main German forces, and in the south by Rumania—both of the Allies having German troop support—it appeared to German strategists that Russia was at many points vulnerable to pincer actions.

The Germans employed these tactics with spectacular success in Poland, the Low Countries and France.

The new phase of the war was proclaimed by the Germans with customary dramatics.

Goebbels Plays Lead

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels read Hitler's statement in early morning over the radio and Von Ribbentrop, who obviously hadn't slept and was extremely serious, called foreign correspondents at 6 a. m., to the foreign office, where he read his note to Russia.

Hitler's whereabouts was not disclosed, but it was recalled that he never was far from action when the German army gets a new assignment.

Germany (which adopted Russian-pioneered techniques in parachute warfare) put the populations on her eastern frontiers on guard against these behind-the-lines warriors.

Civilians were told not to attempt to deal with parachutists themselves but to report them to the nearest police stations.

Winant's only statement on arrival was: "It's good to land in Scotland."

Notifies Molotov Of Nazi Decision

Count Friedrich Werner von der Schulenberg, German ambassador to Moscow, called on Russian Foreign Commissar Molotov yesterday to inform him of Germany's decision to start hostilities against Russia

Sen. Pepper Would Repeal Neutrality Act

Senator Pepper (Democrat), Florida, proposed yesterday that Congress implement President Roosevelt's demand for maintenance of the freedom of the seas by repealing the Neutrality Act which prevents American shipping from entering war zones.

At the same time, some members of the Senate bloc opposing Administration foreign policy expressed belief that the President's message of last Friday on the sinking of the American merchant ship Robin Moor by a German submarine might be the opening move in an effort to revise the neutrality law.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, one of this group, said that while he did not pretend to know the President's intent, it was logical to assume that subsequent steps might be taken toward nullifying the legal restraints which had been placed on American shipping.

"Voluntary Surrender"

"The passage of the Neutrality Act was frankly accepted in all quarters," he declared, "as a voluntary surrender of the right to freedom of the seas in order to prevent our involvment in war. I don't believe the people are anxious to reassert that right, if it means war."

The President said in his message that the sinking of the Robin Moor violated International Law and apparently constituted a warning that "the United States may use the high seas of the world only with Nazi consent," a dictate to which he said this country did not intend to yield.

Pepper, talking to reporters, asserted:

"The Neutrality Act has impaired our defense, it has hampered our efforts to aid Britain, and it has been Hitler's best friend in the United States.

Await Robin Moor Details

"We ought to repeal it and follow that action by increasing our efforts to turn out war materials, joining with Britain in keeping the sea lanes open and aiding Britain to cut off every raw material that is getting into Germany."

Some opponents of the present foreign policy said they were awaiting a more detailed explanation from the State Department about the Robin Moor sinking.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, has said that he was informed 70 per cent of the vessel's cargo was contraband.

Turks to Sign Trade Treaty With Germany

By the Associated Press

Ankara, June 22.—Turkey remained officially neutral in the new war between Russia and Germany today, but disclosed new friendship ties with Germany.

(The Rome radio reported Turkey had proclaimed a state of siege.)

Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu announced a commercial treaty with Germany would be concluded quickly as an aftermath of the nonaggression pact the two countries signed June 18. Turkey already had a friendship treaty with Russia and a nonbelligerent alliance with Britain.

Hitler Assertion Impresses

Adolf Hitler's assertion that he had blocked a Russian scheme for bases on the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus made a deep impression in Turkish circles.

Nazi sources said that in persuading Turkey to sign the 10-year friendship pact Germany had agreed not to demand passage of troops, planes and military equipmetn across Turkey during the war with Britain.

Turkey Imposing Barrier

The verbal German promise was said to have left Turkey an imposing geographical barrier to Hitler's drive to the east. In return, Turkey was reported to have undertaken to close the Dardanelles to the British fleet if the issue arose and to refuse Turkish air bases to British planes.

Authoritative Turkish sources said that both Germany and Britain were told emphatically that Turkey would in no case allow German military transit across the country and that 1,200,000 men stood under arms to protect the nation's sovereignty.

Reports showed that exports from Turkey to Axis countries already were increasing after the friendship pact.

Cotton, pig iron and eggs were shipped yesterday to the Reich while a cargo of sheepskin was consigned to Italy. Turkish sugar factories were beginning work on the new sugar harvest and it appeared likely that a major share of this commodity would be exported to the Axis.

Prices on the Istanbul bourse advanced sharply presumably in expectation of heavy German buying.

Croatia Orders U. S. Consulate Closed

Berlin, June 22 (AP).—The new kingdom of Croatia, carved out of defeated Yugoslavia, today demanded the immediate closing of the United States consulate at Zagreb, the capital, DNB, official German news agency, reported.

DNB said the Croatian demand was backed by charges that American consular authorities in Zagreb has assisted the enemies of Germany and Italy improperly.

A note handed to the United States Consul General by the Croatian foreign minister, directed that all consular officials and employes leave the country.

[The United States has no diplomatic relations with Croatia, but consular officials stationed in Zagreb remained there after the Axis conquest. Croatia now has an Italian prince as king.]

British in Ethiopia Capture Jimma

Cairo, Egypt, June 22 (AP).—British and Ethiopian troops, mopping up Italian strong points in southern Ethiopia, took the town of Jimma today and reported "satisfactory" operations on all other southern fronts.

West of Lakemti, British were reported closing in on other Italian garrisons. Libya was described as quiet.

Esthonia Revolts as Germans And Finns Attack Red Army

By the United Press

Stockholm (Monday), June 23.—A revolt was reported to have broken out in Esthonia on Sunday at the same time Germany hurled her armies against Russia.

Reports that Finnish and German troops were engaged in a joint attack against Russia on the Karelian Isthmus came to the Swedish newspaper Allehanda from Helsinki. They gave no details of the fighting.

Diplomatic quarters, however, claimed early today that only German troops were clashing in Finland with the Red army. They added that reports of Finnish troops battling the Russians were "propaganda."

The revolt against the Red army in Esthonia, apparently long prepared, flared up simultaneously with the German-Finnish attack and still was in progress at a late hour today, according to the Stockholm representative of the official Russian news agency Tass.

He quoted news which he said was direct from Moscow that Red troops were "successfully fighting" the rebels. Earlier a Russian short wave broadcast said the "bourgeoisie-inspired" revolt had been smashed.

The Tass correspondent furnished unconfirmed reports that the rebels had occupied some small armed ships in the Tallinn harbor and were firing at Russian troops in the Esthonian capital.

An official spokesman announced that Sweden would do her utmost to maintain neutrality.

Weekend furloughs for members of the army, navy and air force were cancelled and all Swedish ships in the Baltic Sea were ordered to rush to the safety of Swedish ports.

Inhabitants of the Swedish island of Gotland in the Baltic reported that about 2 a. m. they heard gunfire or explosions from the direction of Latvia, so strong that houses were shaken.

When the Lawyer Called in an Agent . . .

Dear Mr. Johnson: As a lawyer, I often find life insurance playing a part in the lives of my clients. One of your recent columns, which described the service a good agent can render, reminds me of an experience of my own.

Three years ago my friend Jim Raines came to me very much troubled. His business—of which he was the sole owner—had been in bad shape. To keep it going, he had dropped part of his life insurance, posted one policy as collateral for a loan, borrowed heavily on the rest. But the tide had turned.

Now, facing a lower income, he had the problem of keeping up his premiums.

I happened to think of what my agent had once accomplished in a similar case and phoned him.

"Will you talk to Jim?" I asked. "Even though there won't be any business in it for you?"

"Of course," he said. "Be glad to do anything I can."

This is what he did. First, he rearranged the premium dates to make it as easy as possible for Jim to pay the premiums. Then he persuaded him to make regular savings bank deposits, to be used to pay premiums when they came due. Into these went a definite percentage of every bit of income he got, before he had a chance to use a dime for anything else.

Jim's first reaction was that this might be all right for others—but that he didn't need to play psychological tricks on himself. But my agent stuck to his point and won out.

"I certainly wish I'd let some agent do all this for me before," Jim told me, when he saw how the plan was working out. "Oh, I'm not out of the woods yet. But I spend less time worrying and more running my business—which helps more than you've any idea . . ."

Unfortunately, he died eighteen months later. It was a tragic shock, of course, for his family. But the insurance guaranteed them financial security, and his business passed to his oldest son and his son-in-law as a going concern—neither of which would have been the case, I am convinced, if a life insurance agent had not been "glad to do anything he could."

Full Text of Hitler's Proclamation Signaling Attack Against Russia

War Provoked By 'Bad Faith,' Fuehrer Says

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—The official German translation of Adolf Hitler's proclamation on the move against Soviet Russia as picked up by C. B. S. from the German short wave system follows:

People of Germany: National Socialists:

Oppressed by grave cares, doomed to months of silence, the hour has come in which I can at last speak frankly.

When, on September 3, 1939, the German Reich received the British declaration of war, the British attempt yet again repeated itself to frustrate every commencement of a consolidation and therefore of progress in Europe by a war directed against whatever state was the most powerful on the continent at the time.

Thus Britain once ruined Spain in many wars. That was how she waged her wars on Holland. Thus she subsequently fought France with the help of the whole of Europe. And thus, at the beginning of the century, she commenced the encirclement of the German Reich at that time. And in 1914, the Great War.

Only through her internal dissension did Germany succumb in 1918. The consequences were terrible.

After they had declared, as two hypocrites (presumably Britain and France), that they had only fought the . . . Kaiser and his regime, they set forth upon a systematic destruction of Germany as soon as the German army had laid down its arms.

While the prophecies of a French statesman, that there were 20,000,000 Germans too many—that is that this number would have to be exterminated by hunger, disease or emigration—were apparently being fulfilled to the letter, the National Socialist movement began its work of unifying the German people and preparing for the resurrection of the Reich.

Our people arose again from distress and misery and shameful disregard and their redress wore all signs of internal relief.

Britain, especially, was not in any way affected or threatened thereby.

Nevertheless, a new policy of encirclement against Germany born as it was, of hatred, recommenced immediately.

Internally and externally there resulted that bloc familiar to all of us between Jews and Democrats, Bolsheviks and Nationalists, with the sole aim of inhibiting the establishment of the new German national state, of plunging the Reich once more into powerlessness and misery.

Apart from that, the hatred of this international conspiracy was directed against those people, which not favored by fortune, were obliged to earn their daily bread in the hardest of struggles to exist.

Italy and Japan Included

Above all the right of Italy and Japan to share in the goods of this world, was contested just as much as that of Germany. In fact, it was formally denied.

The coalition of these nations, was therefore only an act of self protection, in the face of the threat of an egotistic world combination of wealth and power.

As early as 1936, Mr. Churchill, according to the statements of an American general, Wood, before a committee of the American House of Representatives, declared that Germany was once more becoming too powerful and would, therefore, have to be destroyed.

In the summer of 1939, the time appeared to have come when Britain had set forth upon the destruction of Germany, which was to take the form of a repetition of a comprehensive policy of encirclement.

The plan of the campaign of lies, staged for this purpose, consisted in declaring that other peoples were threatened, entreating them with British promises of guarantees and with assistance, and with making them take action against Germany, just as during the Great War. In this way Britain, from May to August 1939, succeeded in broadcasting to the world that Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia, Finland, Bessarabia and most of the Ukraine were being directly threatened by Germany. A number of the States allowed themselves to be misled into accepting the promise of a guarantee proffered with these assertions, thus joining the new encirclement front directed against Germany.

In these circumstances I considered myself entitled to assume the responsibilities before my own conscience and before the history of the German people, not only of assuring these countries or their government of the falseness of the British assertions, but also in setting the strongest power in the East at rest as to the limits of our interests, by a specially solemn declaration.

National Socialists!

At that time when the pact with Russia was made you probably all felt that it was a bitter and difficult step for me to take. Never did the German people harbor hostile feelings for the peoples of Russia. Yet for over 20 years did Jewish-Bolshevic rulers in Moscow endeavor to set not only Germany, but the whole of Europe aflame. At no time did Germany attempt to carry her National Socialist ideals and conceptions into Russia. Yet the Jewish-Bolshevic rulers in Moscow unswervingly endeavored to force their domination upon us, and upon other European people, not only by ideological means, but above all with military force.

The consequences of the activity of this regime were nothing but chaos, misery and starvation in all countries. On the other hand, I have been striving for 20 years with a minimum of intervention and without destroying our production to arrive at a new Socialist order in Germany which would not only eliminate unemployment but would also permit the worker to receive an ever-greater share of the fruits of their labor.

The success of this policy of economic and social reconstruction of our nation, which aimed primarily at a true people's community by systematically eliminating differences of rank and class, are unique in the entire world. It was therefore only with extreme difficulty that I brought myself, in August, 1939, to send my foreign minister to Moscow in an endeavor there to oppose the British encirclement policy against Germany. I did this only from a sense of responsibility toward the German people, and after all of achieving a permanent relief of the tension and of being able to reduce the sacrifices which might otherwise have been demanded of us.

While Germany solemnly affirmed in Moscow that the territories and countries mentioned with the exception of Lithuania, lay beyond all German political interests, a special agreement was concluded in case Britain would succeed in inciting Poland actually to go to war with Germany. In this case, too, the German claims were subject to a limitation entirely out of proportion to the achievement of the German forces.

National Socialists!

The consequences of this treaty, which I myself had desired and which had been concluded in the interests of the German nation, were very severe indeed, particularly for the Germans living in the countries concerned. Far more than 500,000 German men and women, all of them small farmers, artisans and workmen, were forced to leave their former homeland practically over night in order to escape from a new regime which from the very first threatened them with boundless misery and sooner or later with complete extermination.

In spite of all, thousands of Germans disappeared. It was impossible ever to determine their fate, let alone their whereabouts. Amongst them were no less than 160 men of German citizenship.

To all this I remained silent because I was forced to. For after all it was my one desire to achieve a final relief of the tension and, if possible, a permanent settlement with that state. However, already during our advance in Poland the Soviet rulers suddenly, contrary to the treaty, also claimed Lithuania. The German Reich never had the intention of occupying Lithuania and not only failed to present any such demand to the Lithuanian government, but on the contrary even refused the request of the government then in power in Lithuania that German troops should be sent to Lithuania for that purpose as inconsistent with the aims of German policy.

In spite of all this I complied also with this Russian demand. However this was only the beginning of continually renewed extortions which have been repeated ever since. The victory in Poland, which was won by German troops alone, caused me to address yet another offer of peace to the Western powers. It was refused, owing to the efforts of the international and Jewish warmongers. Already at that time the reason for such a refusal was to be found in the fact that Britain still had hopes of being able to mobilize a European coalition against Germany.

It was to include the Balkans and Soviet Russia.

Britain's Russian Policy

Thereafter the British government decided to send Sir Stafford Cripps as Ambassador to Moscow. He received clear instructions under all circumstances to resume relations between Britain and Soviet Russia and to develop them in a pro-British direction. The British press reported on the progress of this mission for as long as tactical reasons did not impose silence upon them.

In the autumn of 1939 and in the spring of 1940 the first results actually made themselves felt when Russia undertook to subjugate by armed force not only Finland but also the Baltic states, she suddenly saw fit to motivate this action by the assertion, which was as ridiculous as it was false, to protect these countries from an outside menace, or that she must forstall such an event. This could only be meant to apply to Germany, for no other power could ever gain entrance into the Baltic area, let alone go to war there.

Still I had to be silent.

However, those in power in the Kremlin immediately went further. Whereas in the spring of 1940, Germany, in accordance with the so-called pact of friendship, had withdrawn her forces a long way from the eastern frontier and had in fact for a large part cleared these territories entirely of German troops, the concentration of Russian forces at that time was already beginning in a measure which could only be regarded as a deliberate threat to Germany.

According to a statement which Monsieur Molotov personally made at that time, there were 22 Russian divisions in the Baltic states alone already in the spring of 1940. Since the Russian government themselves always maintained that they were called in by the local population, the purpose of their presence in that area could therefore only be demonstration against Germany.

Thus, there occurred the effect, intended by the British and Soviet Russia's operation, namely, the finding of such powerful German forces in the East that a radical conclusion of the war in the West, particularly as regards aircraft, could no longer be vouched for by the German supreme command.

This, however, was in line with the object not only of British but also of Soviet Russia policy; under which both Britain and Russia intended to let this war go on for as long as possible in order to weaken the whole of Europe and render it still more helpless.

Soviet Aims in Rumania

Russia's impending attack on Rumania was equally intended, primarily, in order to gain possession of an important basis, not only of Germany's, but also of Europe's economic life, or, alternately, at least to destroy it.

The Reich, especially since 1933, sought with unending patience to gain the states in the southeast of Europe as trading partners.

We therefore, also have the greatest interest, in witnessing their internal, constitutional consolidation and organization.

Russia's advance into Rumania and Greece's connection with Great Britain threatened to turn these regions, too, within a short time, into a general theater of war.

Contrary to our principles and customs, and at the urgent request of the then Rumanian government, who was itself responsible for this development, I advised acquiescence in Soviet Russian demands for the sake of peace, intimating that Bessarabia should be ceded.

The Rumanian government believed, however, that they could not answer for this before their own people, unless Germany and Italy, in compensation, would at least guarantee the integrity of what still remained of Rumania. I did so with a heavy heart, principally because if the German Reich gives a guarantee, then that means that it also abides by it. We are neither Britons or Jews.

I still believed at that late hour that I had served the cause of peace in that region, if only by myself assuming a serious obligation.

In order, however, finally to solve these problems, and to achieve clarity regarding the Russian attitude toward Germany, as well as under the pressure of the continually increasing mobilization of our eastern frontier, I invited M. Molotov to come to Berlin.

The Soviet minister for foreign affairs then requested Germany's clarification of, or agreement to, the following four questions:

1. M. Molotov's question: "Was the German guarantee for Rumania also directed against Soviet Russia in case of an attack by Soviet Russia against Rumania?" My answer, "The German guarantee is a general one, and is unconditionally binding upon us." Russia, however, had declared to us that she had no other interest in Rumania beyond Bessarabia. The occupation of northern Bukovina had already been a violation of this assurance. I did not therefore think that Russia could now suddenly have more far-reaching intentions against Rumania.

2. Molotov's question: "Russia again felt menaced by Finland. Russia was determined not to tolerate this. Was Germany ready not to give any aid to Finland, and above all to withdraw the German relief troops marching through to (name unclear)?" My answer: "Germany continued to have absolutely no political interest in Finland." A fresh war, waged by Russia against a small Finnish people could not, however, be regarded any longer by the German government as tolerable. All the more so, as we could never believe Russia to be threatened by Finland. But we had no desire that another theater of war should arise in the Baltic.

3. M. Molotov's question: "Was Germany prepared to agree that Russia could give a guarantee to Bulgaria, and could send Soviet Russian troops to Bulgaria for this purpose, whereas he, Molotov, wished to state that they did not intend on that account, for example to depose the king." My answer: "Bulgaria was a sovereign state, and I had no knowledge that Bulgaria had requested Soviet Russia for any kind of guarantee as Rumania had requested Germany. Moreover, I would have to discuss the matter with my allies."

4. M. Molotov's question: "Soviet Russia requires a free passage through the Dardanelles under all cirmustances and for her protection also demanded the occupation of a number of important bases on the Dardanelles and the Bosporus. Was Germany in agreement with this or not?" My answer: "Germany was prepared at all times to agree to an alteration of the statute of Montreux in favor of the Black Sea states. Germany was not prepared to agree to Russia's possession of bases on the straits."

National Socialists!

Here I adopted the only attitude which I could adopt as the responsible leader of the Reich, but also as a conscious representative of European culture and civilization. The consequence was an increase in the Soviet Russian activity directed against the Reich. Above all, however, the immediate commencement of the undermining of the new Rumanian state from within and the attempt to remove the Bulgarian government of propaganda.

Traces Coup d'Etat

With the help of confused and immature leaders of the Rumanian legion a coup d'etat was staged in Rumania, the aim of which was to overthrow the chief of state, Gen. Antonescu, and to produce chaos in the country, so as to remove all legal power of government and thus to precondition for the implementing of the German guarantee.

Nevertheless I still believed it best to remain silent. Immediately after the failure of this undertaking, a renewed reinforcement in the concentration of Russian troops on Germany's eastern frontiers took place. Armored fighting vehicle detachments and parachutists were transferred in continually increasing numbers to a dangerous proximity to the German frontier. The German fighting forces and the German nation know that until a few weeks ago not a single German tank or mechanized division was stationed on our eastern frontier. Had any final proof been required for the coalition which has meanwhile been formed between Great Britain and Soviet Russia, in spite of all diversion and camouflage, then it was provided by the Yugoslav conflict.

Whilst I made every effort to undertake a final attempt to pacify the Balkans, and in sympathetic cooperation with the Duce invited Yugoslavia to join the three-power pact, Britain and the Soviet Union, in joint conspiracy, organized that coup d'etat which removed in one night the government of the time who had been ready to come to an agreement.

For we can today inform the German nation that the Serbian putsch against Germany is not to be explained merely under British, but primarily under Soviet Russian auspices. As we remained silent on this matter also the Soviet leaders now went still one step further. They not only organised the putsch, but a few days later also concluded that well-known friendly agreement with their new subservient vassals, which was intended to strengthen the Serbs in their desire to resist the pacification of the Balkans and to incite them against Germany. And this was no platonic intention.

Moscow demanded the mobilization of the Serbian army. Since even now I still believed it to be better not to speak, those in power in the Kremlin went still a step further. The government of the German Reich today possesses documentary evidence which proves that Russia, in order finally to bring Serbia into the war against Germany, gave her a promise to supply her via Salonika with arms, aircraft, munitions and other war material. And this happened almost at the very moment when I myself advised the Japanese foreign minister, Mr. Matsuoka, to ease the tension with Russia, hoping, as I did, thus to serve the cause of peace. Only the rapid advance of our incomparable divisions to Skoplje as well as the capture of Salonika itself, frustrated the aims of this Soviet Russian-Anglo-Saxon front.

Moscow Sheltered Serbs

The officers of the Serbian airforce, however, fled to Russia and were there immediately received as allies. It was the victory of the Axis powers in the Balkans along which in the first instance thwarted the plan to involve Germany in battles in southeastern Europe lasting for months, throughout the summer, while in the meantime steadily completing the alignment of the Soviet Russian armies and increasing their readiness for war, in order finally, together with Britain and supported by the American supplies anticipated, to throttle and crush the German Reich and Italy.

Thus Moscow not only broke, but miserably betrayed the stipulations of our friendly agreement. All this was done whilst the rulers in the Kremlin, exactly as they had done in the case of Finland and Rumania, up to the last moment, put up a show of peace and friendship and drew up perceptibly innocent dementis.

Although up till now I have been forced by circumstances to keep silent again and again, the moment has now come when to continue as a mere observer would not only be a sin of omission, but a crime against the German people, and even against the whole of Europe.

Today something like 160 Russian divisions are facing our frontiers. For weeks constant violations of this frontier are taking place, not only into our country, but also from the far north down to Rumania. Russian airmen consider it a sport simply and nonchalantly to overlook these frontiers, presumably in order to prove to us that they already feel themselves masters of these territories.

In the night from the seventeenth to the eighteenth of June, Russian reconnaissance parties again pentrated into the Reich's territory and could only be driven back after prolonged firing. This has brought us to the hour when it is necessary for us to take steps against this plot devised by Jewish-Anglo-Saxon warmongers and the equally Jewish rulers of the Bolshevik center in Moscow.

German people!

In this very hour a movement of troops is taking plac which in its extent and magnitude is the greatest that the world has ever seen.

United with their Finnish comrades the warriors who won the victory at Narvik are manning the shores of the Artic Ocean.

German divisions, commanded by the conquerer of Norway, together with the champions of Finnish liberty, commanded by their marshal, are protecting Finnish territory.

From East Prussia down to the Carpathians stretch the formations along the eastern front. Along the shores of the Prut, along the lower regions of the Danube down to the shores of the Black Sea, German and Rumanian soldiers are united under the Rumanian premier, Gen. Antonescu. The task of this front thus no longer is to protect the individual frontiers, but the safety of Europe, and the rescue of us all.

I have therefore decided today to entrust the fate and the future of the German Reich and of our nation once more to the hands of our soldiers. May God our Lord aid us in this of all struggles.

June 22, 1941.

Now that Russia has been attacked by Germany it is expected in official circles that within the next few days she will be granted exemption from the President's general order freezing the funds of all continental European countries. It was announced last week that the department was negotiating with the diplomatic representatives here of Russia, Sweden, Switzerland and Finland for the granting of such exemptions on receipt of assurances that they would not be misused.

Now it is believed to be a foregone conclusion that Russia will get her exemption and that Finland will not but the decision will not be made immediately.

It is believed that the paying out of the $8,800,000 still due to Finland on the $35,000,000 loan made on the authority of Congress by the Export-Import Bank at the time Finland was being attacked by Russia will also be held up now that the little Baltic country is an ally, voluntarily or involuntarily, of Nazi Germany. This is understood already to have been decided.

One of the by-products of Russia's entry into the war may be to remove the last obstacle to the inauguration of economic warfare. It had generally been expected that the general freezing order would be part of such a larger scheme. The British government has been urging for months that it be adopted. Secretary of the Treasury Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., has been one of the principal proponents of such a plan but the State Department has held back.

In support of the Gillette-Coffee resolution to investigate the alleged leakage of United States supplies to the Axis powers figures were recently presented behind closed doors to the House Rules Committee which indicated that there had been extraordinary increases in shipments of American tinplate, taggers tin, toluene ,cotten linters and pulp and oil to Portugal and Spain in 1940 as compared with 1939 and of American lard to Finland, the State Department, however, is said to have thrown its weight at the Rules Committee meeting against the holding of an inquiry on the ground that public opinion, if the facts were known, might call for economic action which would have unfavorable diplomatic effects. Thus Japan might be forced to seek by conquest of the Netherlands Indies the oil that the United States has hitherto supplied while Spain and Portugal might be froced into the arms of the Axis.

Now that Russia has become an enemy of Germany the situation is clearer. Within the next few days Japan may have declared herself. This, it is believed, will promptly be followed by the institution of economic warfare by the United States in close cooperation with Great Britain.

Mentioned to direct economic warfare have been either Herbert Gaston, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Will Clayton, deputy Federal loan administrator, and President James Bryant Conant, of Harvard University.

made possible the same sort of scattered resistance as Chungking's.

Some Japanese comment:

Yomiuri Shimbun—"At present what is watched with keen interest is the future attitude of Britain and the United States. It is a question whether Britain will make a start for peace with Germany, taking the opportunity to cooperate and present a united front against the Soviets, or whether in concert with the Kremlin it will continue the war. The United States, however, has the initiative in continuance of the anti-German war, and Britain herself cannot afford to decide on a peace. In any case, Japan will be affected, and the empire should be cautious and not take the wrong course."

Asahi Shimbun—"Hitler has come to feel the necessity for making preparation for a long war instead of adhering to the tactics of carrying out landing assaults against the British Isles. It is advantageous to Germany to knock down the Soviet before the United States participates."

Hochi Shimbun—"Japan shouldn't indulge in utilitarianism, but should always keep in mind the international facts and world peace, which are the supreme conception of the imperial diplomacy, strictly refraining from rash actions."

The most significant fact to this empire, was that pressure Britain an dthe United States, thus seemingly had been removed from permitting the United States flept to remain in the Pacific.

Japan was reliably reported to have tried unsuccessfully to intervene in the German-Russian crisis, and the United States was said to have been informed of the Japanese efforts.

The semiofficial Domei news agency said the feeling in Tokyo was that the new hostilities might well turn the war into an actual world-wide conflict. The first concrete development, it said, might be the welding of Britain, the United States and Russia into a solid front.

The Japanese-Rusian friendship treaty, signed April 13, provides that "should one of the contracting parties become the object of hostilities on the part of one or several third powers the other contracting party will observe neutrality throughout the duration of the conflict."

Under the tripartite pact of September 27, 1940, Japan is pledged to help Germany if either is "attacked by a power at present not involved in the European war."

The Russian Embassy yard was guarded as usual by Japanese police. Inside the gates women and children talked in excited clusters.

Molotov Charges Nazi Perfidy; Full Text of His Broadcast

By the Associated Press

Moscow, June 22.—The text of Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov's broadcast on the outbreak of war with Germany as translated by Tass, the official Russian news agency, follows:

Citizens of the Soviet Union:

The Soviet government and its head, Comrade Stalin, have authorized me to make the following statement:

Today at 4 o'clock a. m., without any claims having been presented to the Soviet Union, without a declaration of war, German troops attacked our country, attacked our borders at many points and bombed from their airplanes our cities Zhitomir, Kiev, Sevastopol, Kaunus and some others, killing and wounding over 200 persons.

There were also enemy air raids and artillery shelling from Rumanian and Finnish territory.

Blames 'German Fascist Rulers' for Attack

This unheard of attack upon our country is perfidy unparalleled in the history of civilized nations. The attack on our country was perpetrated despite the fact that a treaty of nonaggression had been signed between U. S. S. R. and Germany and that the Soviet government most faithfully abided by all provisions of this treaty.

The attack upon our country was perpetrated despite the fact that during the entire period of operation of this treaty the German government could not find grounds for a single complaint against the U. S. S. R. as regards observance of this treaty.

Entire responsibility for this predatory attack upon the Soviet Union falls fully and completely upon the German Fascist rulers.

At 5:30 a. m., that is after the attack had already been perpetrated, Von der Schulenburg, the German ambassador in Moscow, on behalf of his government made the statement to me as People's Commissar of Foreign Office to the effect that the German government decided to launch war against the U. S. S. R.

In reply to this I stated on behalf of the Soviet government that until the very last moment the German government had not presented any claims to the Soviet government, that Germany attacked the U. S. S. R. R. despite the peaceable position of the Soviet Union, and that for this reason Fascist Germany is the aggressor.

Hitler's Accusations Termed a Lie

On instruction of the government of the Soviet Union I also state that at no point had our troops or our air force committed violation of the frontier, and therefore the statement made this morning by the Rumanian radio to the effect that Soviet aircraft allegedly had fired on Rumanian airdromes is sheer lie and provocation.

Likewise a lie and provocation is the whole declaration made today by Hitler, who is trying belatedly to concoct accusations charging the Soviet Union with failure to observe the Soviet-German pact.

Now that the attack on the Soviet Union has already been committed, the Soviet Union has ordered our troops to repulse the predatory assault and to drive German troops from the territory of our country.

This war has been forced upon us, not by the German people, not by German workers, peasants and intellectuals whose sufferings we well understand, but by the clique of bloodthirsty Fascist rulers of Germany who have enslaved Frenchmen, Czechs, Poles, Serbians, Norway, Belgium, Denmark, Holland, Greece and other nations.

The government of the Soviet Union expresses its unshakable confidence that our valiant army and navy and brave falcons of the Soviet Air Force will acquit themselves with honor in performing their duty to fatherland, to the Soviet people, and will inflict a crushing blow upon the aggressor.

Recalls Russia's Victory Over Napoleon

This is not the first time that our people have had to deal with an attack of an arrogant foe. At the time of Napoleon's invasion of Russia our people's reply was war for the fatherland, and Napoleon suffered defeat and met his doom. It will be the same with Hitler, who in his arrogance has proclaimed a new crusade against our country.

The Red Army and our whole people will again wage victorious war for the fatherland, for our country, for honor, for liberty.

The government of the Soviet Union expresses the firm conviction that the whole population of our country, all workers, peasant and intellectuals, men and women, will conscientiously perform their duties and do their work. Our entire people must now stand solid and united as never before.

Each one of us must demand of himself and of others discipline, organization and self-denial worthy of real Soviet patriots, in order to provide for all the needs of the Red Army, navy and air force, to insure victory over enemy.

The government calls upon you, citizens of the Soviet Union, to rally still more closely around our glorious Bolshevik Party, around our Soviet government, around our great leader and comrade Stalin. Ours is a righteous cause. Enemy shall be defeated. Victory will be ours.

Russian Planes Bombard Finnish Ports

Helsinki Has Alarm but No Attack

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, (Monday) June 23.—Russian aerial bombardments of Finnish ports and ships served explosive notice on little Finland that she was again at war with her big Red neighbor soon after Germany swept the Finns into the new hostilities Sunday as an ally.

[Helsinki had an air raid alarm for 30 minutes but it passed without any disturbance, the United Press said.]

The war-worn Finns, exhausted by the 1939-40 war with Soviet Russia but prepared hastily again for the inevitable, felt the first blows from the air and waited for the land attack that has not yet developed.

The high command, in its first communique issued in the new war, said Soviet bombers rained explosives on ports and vessels without doing much damage.

This was done on the Russian contention that Germany was using Finnish bombers for her attack on Russia, but the Finnish government denied this.

All men between 18 and 59 were ordered into uniform or labor battalions. Air raid shelters were readied. Windows were boarded and taped against bomb concussions.

Soldiers speed through the streets by truck and motorcycle.

Soviet bombers attacked coastal defense works at Alskar Fort, in the Aland Archipelago, yesterday morning but damage was slight, a high command communique said. Scattered attacks from a great height also were made on several Finnish warships in the Turku Archipelago, off the southwestern coast.

Dispatches from the Karelian Isthmus site of what once was the great Mannerheim Line, said all was quiet. That is the logical route for a Red Army march into Finland, and it was the scene of bitter fighting in the 1939-1940 war.

No clashes between Finnish and Russian troops have yet been reported.

The Finnish parliament speaker, M. Hakkila, last night reaffirmed Finland's faith in democracy and said "a single-minded devotion to our cause is the surest safeguard of our freedom."

The government declared a moratorium on banking, specifically on checks and letters of credit, amid her mobilization measures.

WAR OBSERVER—Carrying a bulging knapsack which he said contained information that he would report to his superiors, Capt. James Roosevelt walks with his wife, the former Romelle Schneider, after his arrival yesterday at New York by clipper from an around-the-world swing as a United States military observer

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—Returning from a 'round the world trip as a United States military observer, Capt. James Roosevelt expressed belief tonight the democracies fighting Nazism faced a "tremendous job."

The President's eldest son carried a bulging khaki knapsack which he said contained information he would report to his superiors, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, of the Marine Corps, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, tomorrow in Washington.

Asked whether he was "disheartened," Capt. Roosevelt replied:

"No. It is one of those things and situations in which I can say I am neither heartened nor disheartened."

He added that Great Britain needed planes, tanks and everything this country could send.

His wife, the former Romelle Schneider, met Capt. Roosevelt at LaGuardia Field as he alighted from the Yankee Clipper.

Roosevelt, an officer in the Marine Corps, left the United States April 19, visited China, India, the Middle East and Europe before going to Lisbon, where he departed for this country.

In response to a question as to why he did not go to London, as it was reported he might, he declared:

"I wanted to get back. I felt that some of the information I obtained should be reported as soon as possible."

Reluctant to discuss his experiences in Iraq, where his party had to duck machine gunning and was bombed, Roosevelt said merely he had a piece of shrapnel an arm's length long for a souvenir.

Lindbergh Is 'Not At All Surprised'

Los Angeles, June 22 (AP).—Charles A. Lindbergh today described Germany's declaration of war on Russia as "a very, very unusual development."

"But I'm not at all surprised," he said, "it is something that requires profound analysis."

Rumanians Told War Is to Aid Kin

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, June 22.—Gen. Ion Antonescu sent Rumania's army against Soviet Russia today as a full-fledged ally of Germany, ordering his troops to recapture Rumanian soil and "free your oppressed brothers from the Red yoke of Bolshevism."

[Reuters, British news agency, said one of Antonescu's first steps was to assume power of a generalissimo in Rumania and relinquish his civil role of premier to his nephew, Mihail Antonescu, minister without portfolio in the Bucharest cabinet.]

The general's order of the day to Rumanian forces told them the hour had struck for a holy war to erase the stain of disgrace from Rumania's people and to fight for the rights of the church.

"Free your oppressed brothers from the Red yoke of Bolshevism," he exhorted. "Bring old Bessarabia and the woods of Bucovina, your fields and meadows, back into the Fatherland.

"Soldiers, you will fight shoulder to shoulder and heart to heart with the strongest military force on earth.

"You will fight for the soil of Moldavia and for justice in the world. Be worthy of the honor which history, the army of the great Reich and its extraordinary leader Adolf Hitler have given you. Fight to avenge injustice. Our people, our king and your general demand this of you."

The deal, it was said, was completed a few days ago. The two vessels each of about 8,500 deadweight tons, are being reconditioned in Gulf ports. They will be transferred to Irish registry and manned by Irish crews.

It is understood that Irish merchant marine officers and seamen now are on their way to the United States to join the new additions to Ireland's new transatlantic cargo service, which will be operated by the newly formed Irish Shipping Ltd. Full Break With Axis Debated on Air

Two Democratic Congressmen last night advocated severing of diplomatic relations with the Axis powers, while two Republican colleagues opposed the suggestion in an American Forum of the Air, broadcast via WOL from the Willard Hotel.

Lined up in favor of the proposal were Democratic Representatives John D. Dingell, of Michigan, and F. Edward Hebert, of Louisiana. Protesting any such move were Republican Representatives Hamilton Fish, of New York, and Paul W. Shafer, of Michigan.

Puts Faith In President

Representative Dingell said: "If the accumulation of incidents and transgressions on the part of the Axis powers, including the recent piratical and murderous attack of the Germans upon the Robin Moor, is considered sufficient and advantageous to sever diplomatic relations, I presume that the President would have chosen that course. Events of the future and American public opinion will decide our course and whether or not we shall sever the flimsy tie of diplomatic relations."

Rep. Hebert Agrees

In agreement, Representative Hebert declared: "President Roosevelt and the American people have met Axis challenges with typical American courage. We will determine ourselves whether or not the Axis powers have trespassed on the principles which we have set down and we alone shall make the final decision."

Representative Fish asserted that in a poll of the voters in his district, he found that approximately 88 per cent of the people want to stay out of war.

"Closing of the Axis Embassies in this country would be the final step before war," Fish said.

A warning was issued by Representative Shafer that the question really meant: "Shall we immediately engage in a two-ocean war with a one-ocean navy and an inadequately trained and underequipped Army?"

Hitler's Book Calls Soviet Leaders Scum

When Germany signed a nonaggression pact with Soviet Russia in August, 1939, Hitler was dealing with Stalin and other Communists whom he regarded as "common blood-stained criminals," the "scum of humanity," bloody oppressors whose word was never to be believed.

That was the way Hitler described the Soviet rulers in his testament, "Mein Kampf." After the pact of 1939, which paved the way for Germany's attack on Poland and for the great war that still continues, Hitler changed his tone. He even sent Stalin birthday greetings.

Now, with the green-gray Nazi legions smashing across the Russian frontiers, Hitler again is expressing his true sentiments with respect to Russia. However, his accusations are no match for the invective he hurled at the Soviet leaders in "Mein Kampf."

The Way Hitler Puts It

Here is what Hitler said about the Soviet leaders in his book:

"The present rulers of Russia do not at all think of entering an alliance sincerely or of keeping one.

"We must never forget that the regents of present-day Russia are common blood-stained criminals; that here is the scum of humanity, which, favored by conditions in a tragic hour, overran a great state, butchered and rooted out millions of its leading intellects with savage bloodthirstiness, and for nearly 10 years has exercised the most frightful regime of tyranny of all time.

"Nor must we forget that these rulers belong to a nation which combines a rare mixture of bestial horror with an inconceivable gift of lying, and today more than ever before believes itself called upon to impose its bloody oppression on the whole world.

Unworthy of a Treaty Tie

"We must not forget that the international Jew, who today rules Russia absolutely, sees in Germany, not an ally, but a state marked for the same destiny. But one does not conclude a treaty with someone whose sole interest is the destruction of his partner.

"Above all, one does not make them with parties to whom no treaty would be sacred, since they inhabit this world, not as the advocates of honor and truthfulness, but as the advocates of lying, deceit, theft, rapine, and plundering.

"If anybody thinks of going into treaty ties with parasites, this resembles a tree's efforts to conclude to its own advantage an agreement with a mistletoe."

If anything more devastating than that has been uttered in recent years, it has been what Winston Churchill had had to say about Hitler, the "blood-thirsty guttersnipe," and Mussolini the "Jackal."

While interned, he has written another novel and sent it for publication in the United States where he enjoys his greatest popularity.

Connally Expected To Get Chairmanship

Observers yesterday predicted the chairmanship of the Senate Finance Committee probably will go to Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, through seniority preference, following the death of Senator Pat Harrison.

Connally is outranked by Senators George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts. But it was regarded as unlikely that they would relinquish their present respective chairmanships of the Foreign Relations and Naval Affairs Committees for the vacated post.

Hitler's Drive Perils U.S., Say Communists

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—Leaders of the Communist Party in the United States described the German assault on Soviet Russia tonight as an attack not only upon the Russian people but upon the people of the United States and the entire world.

"It (Russia) is waging a struggle for the cause of the freedom of all nations and peoples," said a statement issued by William Z. Foster, party chairman, and Robert Minor, acting party secretary.

"The armed assault by German fascism and its satellites against the Soviet Union is an unprovoked attack upon the greatest champion of peace, freedom and national independence—the land of socialism," the statement asserted.

Statements of the Nazi-Soviet war also came from Norman Thomas, national chairman of the Socialist Party; the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies and the executive committee of the Fight for Freedom Committee

New Reason to Keep Out

Thomas asserted the conflict gave "new reason for maintaining the fight to keep America out of war;" the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies called for immediate and decisive action with Great Britain in our common defense," and the Fight for Freedom group said the German attack was this country's supreme danger and supreme opportunity.

The Communist statement urged American working peoples to view the Soviet struggle as the "cause of all advanced and progressive mankind" and further admonished them to give:

1. Full support and cooperation to the Soviet Union in its struggle against Hitlerism.

2. Opposition to all "those reactionaries of every stripe who seek in any manner to aid Hitler's attack against the Soviet Union."

The statement declared the Soviet Union always had sought for peace among all nations but that the "Munich conspirators" destroyed possibilities for collective security and made the "second imperialist world war inevitable."

Policy of Giving Aid

Russia since that time, it continued, had pursued a policy of aiding nations struggling for national independence and liberty. The Soviet Union aided the Chinese, the Spanish Republic, "liberated peoples of the western Ukraine, White Russia, Bessarabia and the Baltic States."

"The reactionaries and imperialists of both sides have opposed and conspired against the peace and neutrality of the Soviet Union," the statement added. "They sought to drag the Soviet Union into the imperialist war."

The message Rudolf Hess brought to England, the authors said, was a vision of a "new Munich, a new conspiracy to redivide the world" to be dangled before the imperialists of all countries," especially in England and the United States."

The Soviet Union seeks a "peoples peace based upon the liberation and independence of all nations," the statement concluded.

"For Stalin we have no sympathy," Thomas' statement said. "In every way his cruelty and duplicity have equalled Hitler's own. It was his agreement with Hitler which unleashed the military force of which he is now a prospective victim.

Sees Propaganda Drive

"We shall watch with interest to see how fast American Communists and the organizations which they control or influence will become propagandists for American entry into the war at the side of those 'great democracies,' Stalin's dictatorship and the British Empire."

The Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, in a statement by Lewis W. Douglas, chairman of the National Policy Board, said the German attack "should finally convince all doubting Americans" that Hitler planned world domination and asserted that a successful venture into Russia meant unlimited oil.

Episcopal Bishop Henry W. Hobson, on behalf of the fight for Freedom Committee, said the new conflict left America freer than at any time since the start of the war to use her naval strength in the Atlantic.

"Let us strike by air and by sea and if possible by land," he declared. "Let there be no lagging hands. It is war—war to the death."

John T. Flynn, chairman of the New York chapter of the America First Committee, declared Germany now was resuming where she left off when England delayed her original objectives in the Ukraine and in Rumania.

"If Germany wins, Russia will go Fascist," he said. "If Russia defeats Germany, Germany will go Communist. There is no choice for us at all. The question now is, are we going to fight to make Europe safe for communism?"

Russian Sea Power Rated Low by U. S.

By the Associated Press

American naval sources expressed belief yesterday that Russia would be incapable of any major contribution to the sea war against Germany, at least as far as the Atlantic is concerned.

The Russian fleet, except for tonnage just completed or still under construction, is rated very low among the world's navies and consists largely of aged relics of the Czarist regime.

Latest available data credited her, however, with 716 merchant ships totalling about 1,315,766 gross tons which, if not already bottled up in the Baltic or Black Seas, doubtless would be a welcome addition to Britain's hard-pressed merchant marine.

The Soviet does not make public data concerning the size of her navy, but the latest Janes' "Fighting Ships" said there were a total of 290 combatant ships of all categories either built or under construction for the Russian navy.

Three battleships, one a 35,000-tonner and the others possibly 45,000-tons each, are reported to be under construction and naval men said they thought the first one should be nearing completion although Janes' reported that the work was going very poorly, chiefly because the Soviet was forced to import most of the machinery.

Numerically, the Russian fleet is strongest in submarines, having 171 in service and an undetermined number under construction. According to Janes', the Soviets have nine cruisers with four more building, 64 destroyers and 34 more building and two aircraft carriers under construction.

The present whereabouts of these units is problematical. Vladivostok, on the Sea of Japan, is regarded as the main Russian naval base, but Janes' said only 70 submarines, 50 motor torpedo boats and a number of patrol craft are reported to be there. From Vladivostok, the Russians presumably would have access to the North Pacific but there was considerable doubt among naval men here as to whether any of the balance of the Russian navy, if now in the Black or Baltic Seas, could get out to assist the British in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Navy Pays Final Homage to 33 Entombed Aboard Sunken O-9

By Gardner Frost
United Press Staff Writer

Aboard the U. S. Submarine Triton off Portsmouth, N. H., June 22.—On the breeze-wrinkled sea 24 miles offshore, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox gently dropped a rose-encrusted wreath late today in a final gesture of honor for the 33 officers and men of the submarine O-9 who died while training for this Nation's defense.

His voice choked with emotion and his eyes suspiciously moist as he paused, gazed 100 yards away to a buoy that marked the crew's perpetual tomb, and said:

"Every stride of civilization has been paid for in sacrifice—to you and your shipmates we say goodby and God bless you."

A fast-dying sun cast a melancholy glow on the black sister submarines O-6 and O-10 that rolled slightly on the hazy sea 440 feet above the spot where a few hours earlier the Navy had concluded its futile efforts to raise the relic of World War days which had been recommissioned because of the present emergency.

A mile distant the hulking black submarine tender Vixen sent a full 21-gun salute re-echoing over the flotilla of 12 rescue vessels including submarines, tugs and a destroyer where 1,000 sailors in dress blues lined the rails.

Secretary Knox moved backward a few steps on the Triton's deck and wiped his eyes with a handkerchief drawn from the breast pocket of his white coat. He, like other naval officials present, wore a black crepe armband.

Wreaths Cast at Sea

Three of the wreaths were tossed into the sea by Rear Admirals Richard Edwards and John D. Wainwright and by Seaman James M. White of the Triton. All were contributed by various branches of the Navy.

Then Mrs. Knox, who had stood by her husband near the submarine's 3-inch deck gun, stepped to the rail and tossed her bouquet of American Beauty roses over "in tribute to the lost crew's mothers."

She paused even longer than had her husband, gazing at the green-blue sea. Two of the buds broke from the bouquet and were brought fluttering back to her feet by the breeze. Admiral Wainwright handed these to her and she dropped them over the side, held her hand upraised a moment and then returned to her place.

The ceremonies followed by 3½ hours the Navy's official announcement that all aboard the O-9 were dead and that salvage efforts would be abandoned "because of the danger to the life of the divers."

The Navy had refused to give up "all hope" though it was generally considered all died soon after the submarine foundered during a 2-hour test dive on trial grounds off Portsmouth navy yard at 10:35 A. M. (E. D. T.) Friday.

Halts Rescue Efforts

Early today, after Portsmouth Commandant Wainwright and Atlantic fleet submarine Commander Edwards had conferred, it was decided to end futile rescue efforts and hold memorial funeral services immediately.

All ranking officers, dressed in summer whites and wearing crepe ribbons on arm and sword hilts, stood at attention as Lieut. Comdr. Homer G. Glunt, yard chaplain here, read brief excerpts from the poem "Abide With Me" and "Beyond the Horizon."

No relatives of the lost crew were present to hear the naval chaplain say the crew "gave their lives unselfishly for the future generations in serving democracy and the cause of righteousness."

Secretary Knox, speaking briefly for the Navy Department and "all Navy men everywhere," said:

"I want the people of the United States to remember that these men went to their fate willingly as volunteers, because every officer and man in the submarine service must be a volunteer.

"The first duty in such a country is ours is defense in time of danger. Defense means necessary risk. These men incurred such risk.

"With all the conviction that I am capable of uttering, I say that our country will last only as long as there are men left to make sacrifices as these men did."

Secretary Knox said he considered the decision of the admirals to abandon rescue and salvage attempts "extremely wise."

"The men aboard the O-9 never would have wished others to attempt the foolhardy rescue at that depth," he said. "Those men down there would not have us risk other lives to give them another resting place."

Marines Fire Volleys

An honorary Marine guard of three squads under command of Col. Harry L. Smith stood smartly at attention during the half-hour ceremonies on the Triton's after deck.

Then, as final benediction was passed, they raised their rifles and fired three volleys at command. A Marine bugler sounded taps and the ceremonies were concluded.

By nightfall nothing remained to mark the spot where the O-9 foundered. A marker buoy that had floated since the submarine was reached with grapnels Friday night was removed and the ships that had stood by the spot returned to the bases at Portsmouth or New London, Conn.

First actual contact with the submarine was made today when two divers—E. M. Metzger and Claude Conger—made the treacherous descent to the blue mud ocean floor.

All these men could report was that they reached a "dark object" which they believed was the O-9 However, they set a record for working dives since the 440-foot drop bettered by 133 feet the previous record set in Honolulu March 24, 1915.

Prior to their feat two other divers had attempted the descent but had returned, after dropping 370 and 380 feet, respectively because of exhaustion.

worth, select him as president pro tempore of the Senate.

"Keen of intellect, sound in principle, shrew in judgment, he had rare gifts of kindly wit, humor and irony which delighted all.

"Pat Harrison's friendship was a privilege to me personally for 30 years. He will be sadly missed in this hour of grave emergency," the President said.

Tribute by George

Chairman George (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said Senator Harrison's death removed "one of the ablest and most useful men in public life at a time when his mature judgment and fine qualities of leadership are so much needed."

He had undergone an operation for an intestinal obstruction last Monday, rallied well, but on Friday took a turn for the worse. His death was not unexpected.

Besides Pat Harrison, jr., two other children survive. They are Mrs. James W. Cummings, of Bethesda, Md., and Mrs. Irvin Miller, of Nashville, Tenn.; a brother, Burroughs Harrison, of Kilmichael, Miss., and a sister, Mrs. C. E. Saunders, of Crystal Springs, Miss.

MYSTERIOUS "OLD MASTER" IN MAYFAIR. Jimmy Doyle, electric guitarist with Mayfair's Chordsmen, owns an antique Italian painting that may or may not be a Giotto. Experts disagree on the question. Principal point of dissension is that the picture is done on canvas while Giotto usually, but not always, worked on wood. But it's been in Jimmy's family for 400 years (he's Italian on his mother's side). The subject is a Madonna and Child.

Since he's been in Washington Jimmy has haunted the National Art Gallery, arrived at the conclusion that his "Giotto" looks like a Giotto except for the eyes. At any rate, he'd like to find out just what sort of "old master" he owns. He says, "It might make the difference between my being a millionaire or a guitar player."

NEW ORLEANS BETWEEN DUSK AND DAWN. Most glamorous months of his life were those he spent in the New Orleans French quarter in the Nut Club, says Don Taylor, of Restaurant "823." His first tour of N'Orleans was in the company of a vandyked old gentleman whom he never saw before and never saw again. "Sir, allow me to show you the real New Orleans," said this benevolent codger, and between 2 a. m. and dawn he conducted Don through the "Street of Whispers" and the old haunts of LaFitte, the pirate. At sunrise they arrived under the "Dueling Oaks," where Louisiana bloods used to lose their red and blue corpuscles. A perfect conclusion to a Nut Club evening.

Russia Will Crush Nazi Attack, Ambassador Predicts

Rumanians, Finns State Their Stands

The violent ending of the Hitler-Stalin "marriage of convenience" yesterday brought three formal statements from Washington's Embassy Row.

Constantine A. Oumansky, Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, predicted that Hitler would suffer the same fate as Napoleon in his invasion of Russia.

Hjalmar J. Procope, Minister of Finland, said that Finland was in the midst of a danger zone, but insisted that "Finland is not at war." Hitler had claimed Finland as an ally.

The Rumanian Legation said that Rumania, in lining up against Russia, was seeking to liberate territory seized by Russia.

British Ambassador Lord Halifax withheld comment.

Soviet Ambassador Constantine A. Oumansky:

"Hitler struck at my country suddenly. But this time Nazism attacked not a suprised and unprepared people, but a mighty nation of 193,000,000 people, a nation which knows what it defends and how to defend it, and which meets this assault with iron determination to repulse and to smash the attacker.

"Hitler Has Miscalculated"

"Hitler presented no claims, gave no reasons, did not declare war before he violated the sanctity of Soviet borders. Only after he had actually started bombing and shelling Soviet towns, operating partly from the territory of Nazified border states, did he concoct his transparently observed pretext which he for the first time presented this morning to my government.

"Our policy of maintaining peace has been so consistent that we signed and fulfilled a nonaggression pact with Nazi Germany, a regime which has been built on a program and policy of hatred toward my country and has exploited this reputation to its advantage. Still, we pledged peace, and we kept peace. Hitler has broken this peace, but this time Hitler has miscalculated.

"Mr. Molotov this morning reminded the world how the Russian people defeated and doomed over a century ago another overconfident and arrogant Napoleon. Our people called the war of 1812 the war for the fatherland. The glorious tradition of that struggle will be enhanced in this new war for the fatherland, for the honor and liberty of our people.

"For today ours is a nation of a moral and political unity and strength unknown in the past. It is devoted to its leaders and has utmost confidence in its armed forces, which are ready for any test.

"Hitler's attack upon my country will be crushed!"

Finns' Position Stated

Hjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister, said:

Finland fought in the winter of 1940 for her very existence, for home and religion, for liberty and democracy.

"Since the peace in March, 1940, she has had to struggle with the tremendous problems of reconstruction and rehabilitation. She has had to fight against threatening starvation and exposure. Hunger has been her only enemy. Her sincere and calm wish is to live in peace with all nations. Finland has absolutely no aggressive or provocative intention, but now, against her wish and through no fault of her own, she has been dragged into the midst of international turmoil.

"Finland is in the midst of the danger zone. But Finland is and will remain an independent and sovereign state. For this she has fought before and she is ready to fight again. That is our point. We Finns are pro-Finnish and will not fight for other interests."

"But Finland is not at war. The relations with Russia continue as hitherto. There have been violations of our territory by Russian planes. They are the dreadful incidents.

"However, our hope is that we will be left in peace. But if we are attacked, we will defend ourselves. I think that every nation has an inalienable right to do so. We will fight to defend our independence, our liberty, and our democratic way of living because, please remember, Finland is and will, whatever happens, remain a liberty-loving democratic people."

Rumanian Legation Speaks

The Rumanian Legation said:

"One year ago Communist Russia presented to a peaceful Rumania an ultimatum for the unconditional surrender of the whole of Bessarabia and of Northern Bucovina. Pressed on the west by a hostile neighbor and lacking the material means of defending simultaneously two very extensive frontiers, the Rumanian government saw no way of opposing single-handed the Communist aggression.

"But the Rumanian government and the Rumanian people never acquiesced in the loss of these ancient Rumanian lands inhabited by more than 2,000,000 landowning Rumanians or in the subjection by ruthless force of these Rumanians to an alien rule synonymous throughout the world to the most brutal oppression.

"Therefore the Rumanian army is acting today to liberate and recover Rumanian national patrimony, overrun without justification by the unprovoked aggression of Communist Russia."

Invasion of Soviet Relieves Britain, Hoover Declares

New York, June 22 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover said today of the German invasion of Russia:

"It is one half dozen more reasons for the United States staying out of the European war, and secondly, it greatly releases the pressure on the British."

Interviewed on his return by plane from the West Coast, Hoover said he had "two jobs in this world at the present time."

"The first," he said, "is to try to contribute what I can to keep the country out of the European war. The second is to do what I can to secure food for some 30,000,000 starving people in Europe."

Sweden Decides To Stay Neutral Amid New Conflict

Stockholm, June 22 (AP).—Sweden has decided to carry on its policy of neutrality in the midst of German-Russian hostilities.

Official circles said there was no reason to expect an immediate risk of involvement and that Sweden would proceed calmly, cooly and firmly.

Mining of the Baltic Sea by the Germans will mean serious risks to Swedish commerce, which will be obliged to follow its territorial waters.

It was pointed out that Germany had made no demands to send troops through Sweden and there were no reports from Finland that Finnish troops were marching with the Germans.

It was reported that the Finns had protested to Moscow against Russian bombing of South Finland and Finnish armored ships.

Spain Hails Nazi War Against Her 'Hated Enemy'

Madrid, June 22 (AP).—Spain's situation in regard to the German-Italian Axis has been clairified by the German war on Soviet Russia since Germany now is fighting "Spain's hated enemy against whom she (Spain) fought for three years" (in her civil war), authorized sources said today.

Spain accepted with dislike the signature of Germany's nonaggression pact with Russia in August, 1939, although she was pressed at the time to hail the pact as "a master stroke of diplomacy" which destroyed the attempt to encircle Germany, it was said.

Now, the authorized sources continued, "Friends are with friends and enemies are known."

Senator Hattie Caraway (Democrat), of Ark., was voted an honorary member of the Arkansas Avenue group at the executive meeting. Property assessments in the community were discussed, with further debate on the subject slated for Thursday's meeting.

U. S. Monopoly Seen on Vital War Materials

By the Associated Press

Establishment of Government monopolies on the importation of chromium, tungsten, tin and other strategic materials was forecast in high Government circles yesterday.

A virtual monopoly in rubber importing was created Saturday when President Roosevelt barred private imports from the Far East. The rubber reserve corporation, a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, will make all purchases from this area which supplies about 80 per cent of American imports.

Officials said that monopolies on imports of other strategic materials probably would become necessary for the same reasons that action was taken with respect to rubber.

In the case of rubber, they said, the order was designed to eliminate undesirable competition between Americans in buying this strategic material, avoid confusion over the allotment of scanty shipping space, and improve the priorities system of getting vital defense materials to those manufacturers filling defense orders.

Jesse H. Jones, administrator of the Federal Loan Agency who arranged the rubber deal, declined to comment on the possibility of extending the plan to other materials, but indicated it was under study.

Nearly all the tin used by this country comes from the Far East, as does rubber, and that region also is an important supplier of chromium, manganese and tungsten. Approximately $50,000,000 worth of these ores have been ordered from China by the Metals Reserve Co., another RFC subsidiary.

Import controls could be an important part of a coordinated system of economic defense which has been advocated by many high Government officials.

108,776 Enrollees In CCC Complete First-Aid Course

A total of 108,776 CCC enrollees completed the American Red Cross standard 20-hour first-aid course during the first ten months of the fiscal year, James J. McEnete, director of the CCC, reported yesterday.

This figure compares with 68,142 graduated in first aid courses last year. McEntee said that the sharp increase over previous years resulted from an order issued last fall directing all enrollees and camp officials to take the course.

Commented McEntee: "The CCC first aid training program has proved of immense value. Whenever an emergency arises, such as floods, tornadoes, hurricanes, fires or heavy snowfalls, the men of the corps are on the job helping to alleviate suffering and distress.

Italy Admits Drive on Soviet Is for Supplies

By the Associated Press

Rome, June 22.—Italy declared war on the Soviet Union today, following Germany's lead in what Italians called at once a "crusade of liberation" against bolshevism and a drive for supplies of wheat and oil for a long struggle against Britain and the United States.

How, if at all, Italy would participate actively was not learned. The likeliest points of belligerent contact between Italy and Russia were at sea. It might become Italy's task to cooperate with the Germans in an attempt to block the western entrance of the Dardanelles against passage of Russian ships.

Virginio Gayda, chief editorial spokesman for fascism, wrote that the drive into Russia was to gain food for Europe to counter the Allied blockade and he charged that the United States wants to starve all Europe.

News that Italy had taken on another belligerent fell quietly on Rome in the middle of a stuffy summer day. With the exception of blackouts, minor transportation annoyances and food restrictions, Rome has never seemed like a wartime capital.

The Italian government informed the Russian Ambassador, Nicolai Gorelchin, that a state of war existed between Italy and his nation as from 5:30 a. m. today.

The news was broken to the Italian public in a brief broadcast by the Rome radio at 1 p. m.

Observers regarded the campaign against Russia for her raw material as a sign that Hitler and Mussolini are convinced the United States now is actively in the war on Britain's side. With American resources going to Britain, the Axis powers had to look to another large reservoir of such resources, which is Russia.

Fascists declared unofficially also that the Russian campaign would result in bringing Spain into the Axis lineup of all Europe, implying Portugal too would have to come into the German-Italian camp eventually.

Capitalites Jam Roads, Beaches Fleeing Heat

The temperature probably will blaze up to the nineties again today after a weekend of sizzling weather that crowded Washingtonians onto nearby highways and beaches.

The maximum yesterday, according to the Weather Bureau, was 93 at 4:30 p. m. Low was 71 at 5:30 a. m. The likelihood of thunder showers this afternoon, when the mercury is expected to go to 93, was forecast.

Although highways were crowded, few accidents were reported in the vicinity of Washington as a result of the Sunday traffic. The new Washington National Airport reported more than 10,000 autos had arrived at the field by 6 p. m. At North Beach, Md., a season record of 20,000 bathers was reported.

Neill Punte, 20, of Baltimore, was drowned yesterday afternoon while swimming with a party of friends in the Severn River near Whitney's Landing.

Lowell Caraway, 28, of 612 Twenty-third Street Northwest, was taken to Casualty Hospital by the Marlboro Rescue Squad after an accident at Oxen Hill, Md. Caraway was reported in an undetermined condition with head injuries.

500 Campaigners Due to Report At USO Luncheon

More than 500 volunteer campaign workers are expected to attend the second general report luncheon of the United Service Organizations' District of Columbia drive at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow at 12:30 p. m.

Directors of the drive said they expected tomorrow's report to "indicate even greater progress" toward the District goal of $250,000 than the 20 per cent mark reported at last week's luncheon.

In discussing progress of the U. S. O. drive here to date, Sidney F. Taliaferro, District general chairman, estimated that the national campaign to raise $10,765,000 is already nearing the half-way mark, with nearly 200 communities over their quotas.

Goebbels Reads Proclamation

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

TENSE MOMENT—Flanked by a quartet of tense-faced aides, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels (seated), German propaganda minister, broadcasts a proclamation by Adolf Hitler from Berlin early yesterday. This preceded Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's radio announcement of hostilities between Germany and Russia

Broadcasts From Field Bring Roar of Battle to Berliners

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 22.—Front line news from the new eastern battlefields blared out of German radios today to the accompaniment of the actual sound of machineguns, bombs, artillery, and tanks in action.

The German machine swept forward at 3:05 a. m., said an army reporter crouching behind a tree at an East Prussian border village as the sound of guns roared from the radio.

In an excited voice he told how infantry advanced across a street in a small village, unidentified in his account, to a line of tank obstructions, beyond which lay No Man's Land.

"The Russian fire is not enough to hold up our infantry," the reporter said.

"Light machine guns are now going forward. The (Russian) bunker over there still answers. It is not made of concrete, but of logs.

Several Meters Won

"The Russians are coming forward now, but naturally they are stopped. It is impossible for them to advance. Again we see our infantry going ahead. Several meters of land have been won already."

The announcer was silent. The fire of small field guns and machineguns could be heard.

Suddenly the speaker declared the bunker had been taken and added, "Apparently the first Russian prisoners are in our hands."

After another pause he said the German infantry had reached the barracks behind the bunker.

"I can see German soldiers wtihin the barracks," the announcer shouted enthusiastically. "It's taken!"

A reporter who described the first dive-bombing raid on a Russian airport emphasized that the Luftwaffe was engaged in steady raids over Russian soil.

Planes Hit On Ground

"As I took off with an atacking group in the early morning," he said, "flashes of German artillery could be seen clearly. The first fires on Russian territory were raging, the villages appeared deserted.

"There were great stretches of forest interspersed with extensive swamps. Then the airport came into view. The Junkers 89 dived on the airport to the height of a house. A bomber and a number of single-motor planes were standing in long rows on the field. We dropped bombs.

"There were explosions in the midst of the planes. The raid was a complete surprise. In a short time the airport was in flames.

Nazi Films May Be Included In New Propaganda Curbs

Secretary Hull said yesterday that the State Department was drafting legislation tightening the restrictions on dissemination of foreign propaganda in the United States.

He made the statement in a letter to Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, in reply to a suggestion from the New Yorker that Axis propaganda films be barred from American motion picture theaters. Mead mentioned such pictures as "Victory in the West" and "Baptism of Fire."

Hull also wrote that the State, Treasury and Justice Departments were "giving active consideration to the question of whether the dissemination of Axis propaganda in this country cannot be prevented by other means, and it is my hope that a solution will soon be found by which a proper control over the dissemination of propaganda material may be effected."

The legislation which is being drafted, Hull said, would be an amendment to a 1938 law requiring agents of foreign principals to register with the State Department.

He added that a "careful watch over propaganda material" had been kept by the Department to determine whether the act was being complied with, but that it had been felt for some time that "an elaboration and tightening would be desirable.

Japan's Dilemma

Confusion over the Russo-German war cannot be more confounded than in Japan. Russia is traditionally the enemy of Japan, just as Russia is traditionally the enemy of the Scandinavian countries. Yet the Japanese are bound by the neutrality pact with Moscow, which was recently signed on Yosuke Matsuoka's way back from Berlin, to remain aloof in the event of Soviet Russia's embroilment in hostilities. It seems certain that the Russo-Japanese pact was engineered by Hitler. Engaged in the west in the destruction of Britain, the Nazis were anxious to lop off Britain's tail in the Far East, and, moreover, to keep the United States busy in the Pacific. Only Japan could do this job for Hitler. But the Nipponese were not only bogged down in China; they were stopped from a southward push by fear of Russian aggression in the north. It appeared an equally excellent plan to Matsuoka as to Hitler, therefore, that Stalin should be persuaded to maintain the status quo in the Pacific as between Moscow and Tokyo.

But so far neither Berlin nor Tokyo has gained any advantage from the Russo-Japanese pact. The Japanese have not ventured to move south. Indeed, they have been discomfited diplomatically in their negotiations with the Dutch over economic concessions in the Dutch East Indies. All manner of reasons could be adduced for Japan's immobilization. Outstanding is the fact that the pact was mainly pro forma, since neither side respected or trusted the other. For instance, the agreement has not appeared strong enough to the Japanese to persuade them to withdraw many soldiers from their Siberian frontier in Manchukuo. And the Soviet Union has continued to send supplies along the overland route to Japan's enemy, China.

Now Japan is in a dilemma. Having gained nothing at all from the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact, she is confronted by the spectacle of Moscow engaged in hostilities in the west with Germany. In the prepact days such a sight would have been a golden opportunity for militarist Japan. The pickings for Japan in Siberia simply call out to be collected. For the Japanese have always entertained territorial ambitions in the maritime provinces of Siberia (which are just across the way from northern Japan), and, indeed, like to think of the time when they can water their horses, as the Japanese jingoes used to put it, as far west as the Urals. So it looks as if the Japanese now may seek to forget the empty Russo-Japanese pact, and intervene in the Russo-German war. Of course, such an act on Japan's part might be just as much to Hitler's liking, now that he is engaged in war with Russia, as the Japanese agreement with Moscow was. However, any such Japanese move against Moscow would not necessarily be pro-Hitler in the long run, but, on the contrary, might prove to be the first step of the Japanese away from their Axis arrangement with Hitler.

Unified Air Corps

The War Department may deny it but expediency seems pretty clearly to have figured in the consolidation of the Air Corps into a unit to be known as "The Army Air Forces." For months the Department has been under constantly expanding Congressional and popular pressure for a separate air force. Just when the Senate Military Affairs Committee was getting ready to hold hearings on the McCarran bill, which would establish a third and independent air branch of the armed services, headed by a Secretary of Military Aviation, the move to consolidate was announced. In the large, it is an organizational reshuffle. No major alteration in air tactics is contemplated and present leaders will carry on more or less with their same jobs. The most constructive aspect of the consolidation seems to be the long overdue centering of responsibility for the air arms upon one head, Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, who will also direct the coordinating activities of the newly created Army Air Council. The War Department has what it feels to be compelling reasons against a separate air force now, not the least of which, Secretary Stimson emphasizes, is that it would be necessary to "reorganize and redesign the entire defense organization of this country." Many persons, in and out of the service, will debate this point. But regardless, the Department's apparent concession, limited though it is, indicates that progress, as in the past, is still being forced from without. It also indicates that some officials in the department, as well as proponents of a separate air force who are outside, have yet to accept the simple formula, which recognizes that air power is more than an adjunct of surface forces but that it does not supplant either armies or navies. In the circumstances, air power seems destined to continue as the stepchild of the services.

The Struggle Broadens

On August 23, 1939, Russia and Germany signed a pact in which they mutually pledged themselves "to refrain from any act of force, any aggressive act and any attacks against each other in conjunction with any other powers." The agreement was to run for ten years and to be automatically renewed for an additional five years "unless one of the contracting parties gives notice to terminate it one year before its expiration." Today German panzer divisions are moving into Russia and German planes are bombing Russian cities. The Nazi-Bolshevik marriage of convenience, as cynical a union as the world has ever witnessed, has now been dissolved in blood, and only 22 months after it was made. Having squeezed the pact of August 23, 1939, dry of all advantage, Hitler now finds it advisable to turn against an erstwhile friend who rendered such yeoman service to him during the first year of the war, revert to that policy of eastward expansion expounded in "Mein Kampf," and pose as the defender of European civilization against the Bolsheviks. "In deadly enmity," says Joachim von Ribbentrop in his proclamation, "national socialism and bolshevism stand opposite each other." But only the purblind will be fooled by this nonsense. The Nazi brutalitarians have a record as "defenders of civilization" which is only too amply displayed in the countless thousands of broken homes, the ruined cities, the smashed altars of Poland, Norway, the Low Countries, France, Yugoslavia and Greece and the other countries touched by the evil blight of Hitlerism.

By making his deal with Hitler 22 months ago, Stalin hoped to divert the Nazi lightning from the Soviet Union. He sought to give his country time to build up her defenses against the ultimate day of reckoning with the Reich. But the war he sought to avert has now engulfed Russia, and under circumstances far more unfavorable than those which obtained at the time the Russo-German pact was made. Germany is stronger today than she was then and the enemies and neutrals that opposed her in the west and the south have all, with the exception of Great Britain, been flattened out under the Nazi juggernaut. For the men of the Kremlin this is the day of retribution.

But the avenging sword is drawing blood from Hitler, too. Let there be no mistake about it, Germany's attack on Russia is an admission of failure, a far-reaching attempt to extricate the Reich from the perils that confront her. The German armies have won a glittering succession of victories on a dozen battlefields. But that final victory which loomed so close a year ago, at the time of the fall of France, remains beyond the horizon. Great Britain is unconquered and uncowed. America's contribution to the Allies grows more impressive with each succeeding month. The war threatens to be a long one. Though she has the resources of a continent to draw on, Germany cannot match the resources which in the course of time can and will be placed at Britain's disposal. So Hitler has found it necessary to strike out once more and this time seek to draw from the Ukraine and the Caucasus, the wheat and minerals and oil which the Reich desperately needs. But the price Hitler may find it necessary to pay for these supplies may prove a heavy one.

The war which Hitler is now waging on Russia is in an essential aspect a looting operation. But it is also more than that. As Winston Churchill has so well pointed out in his radio address yesterday, the attack on the Soviet Union must be regarded, in its military phase, as the prelude for an assault on Great Britain. As long as Hitler had to keep a large number of men immobilized on Germany's eastern borders the full force of the German Wehrmacht could not be hurled against the British Isles without whose subjugation victory is impossible for the Nazis. And, furthermore, Hitler undoubtedly hopes, by putting himself forward once again in the guise of a St. George fighting the dragon of bolshevism, to confuse public opinion in Great Britain, the United States and other countries, and thus pave the way for a peace negotiated on his terms. Anticipating this move, Churchill has made it clear that Great Britain will not for a moment allow herself to be diverted from her resolution to destroy Hitler and every vestige of the Nazi regime, to make no terms with the Third Reich, to fight on until victory has been won. To that end the contribution of any nation which is prepared to fight Hitler will be welcomed and those who join with Germany will be regarded as enemies. Churchill's declaration should help clear the air of a good deal of the confusion which is bound to arise from this great landmark in World War II.

Regional Capitals

It is not improbable that the boom-town problems now arising in the Capital to plague Congress may revive interest in a systematic decentralization of governmental departments and bureaus. At present drastic remedies such as the removal of entire agencies or departments from Washington are being proposed. They are foolish as well as drastic. Acceptance of these frantic measures would amount to chaotic scattering of the Federal Government through the States. If Congress settles down to a comprehensive study of the problem, however, the result may well be relief of congestion here and efficient coordination of Federal activities out in the field. The starting point may be simply stated. From the standpoint of good government all major Federal agencies should undoubtedly continue to have their headquarters in the Nation's Capital. Only by such centralization at the top can orderly, unified and efficient administration be attained. However, much of the detailed work of many agencies can properly be done out in the field. Government undertakings intimately affecting the lives of the people ought to be directed by officials who are close to the people they serve. That principle has been recognized in theory on Capitol Hill but often ignored in practice. The present lack of space in Washington ought to assure its revival in practical form.

In its 1935 report the National Resources Committee suggested the creation of regional planning commissions to study such problems as flood control, soil erosion and development of electric power. That ambitious and controversial plan should not be confused with the more immediate need for decentralizing many existing Federal agencies and establishing regional headquarters outside of Washington. Substantial sums might be saved and field administration could be made more efficient if the regional offices now scattered indiscriminately were brought together in centrally-located cities for each major region. In short, subcapitals might well be designated in such well defined areas as New England, the Rocky Mountain States and so forth, even though some field offices could not properly be located in those cities. Such well-established nuclei of governmental activity would encourage decentralization as a routine practice. Certainly they would offer greater flexibility in meeting a situation like that now beginning to plague official Washington.

Curb On Rents

Over three weeks ago an Administration-sponsored bill providing for emergency control of District rentals was introduced by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee. Hearings on the bill have been suspended, but will be resumed, it is said, upon completion of a Labor Department study of rents paid by Government employes. If this study shows a need for rent control here, the House should arrange to act quickly, for the longer the delay, the greater becomes the danger that the situation will get out of hand. Control of rentals, like all other forms of price control, is much more effective if it is preventive rather than repressive or punitive in character. Indeed, the mere passage of the Administration rent-control bill, carrying permissive powers of regulation, would probably obviate the need for any extensive use of such powers.

Every passing day, however, brings more strangers into the city, adds to the existing congestion, and increases the temptation of landlords to take advantage of the situation by boosting rents. The latest version of the Randolph bill, which was prepared in the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, is flexible and would give the properly constituted authorities broad powers to deal with all types of property, when and if it becomes necessary to do so. This model bill is designed to meet not only the problems of Washington but also those of other communities faced by similar emergencies. If Congress acts promptly, therefore, impetus will be given to the movement to establish similar safeguards in other areas where the defense program has created acute housing shortages.

SPIRIT ETERNAL

Spirit so scornful in your house of flesh,
So proud and utterly bereft of pity,
With each denial tearing down afresh
The walls that hide an undefended city;
You with electric wings to sear the night,
You, who when time is old will bear his staff,
Who leave me here a world beneath your flight,
To tremble at the echo of your laugh;

Remember pulses running against time,
And hands that crumble in the hands they 'hold,
Comfort the lips that murmur in their prime,
"Save me, my love, from ever growing old."
Spirit that knows no hunger, give the crust;
All that you never face, the body must.

Crime Conditions

There is a tendency to blame the police for crime conditions in Washington when, as a matter of fact, Washington is paying the penalty for the action of the sob sisters who have prevented any adequate control of juvenile criminals during the past ten years, and for the weak-kneed Congressmen who have passed the legislation advocated by the sob sisters (male ones included).

Take a look at the conditions in the National Training School for Girls, publicized in recent months, and remember that recently the courts held that not even the Department of Justice could do anything about a youth so tough and incorrigible that even the National Training School for Boys could not handle him. Congress had fixed it so that only the Jevenile Court could take any action in that case, and the court and its agencies had already been shown to be impotent to control the situation.

The civic leaders, congressional committees and others who are responsible for this mess should remember that young criminals have a habit of growing up, and if they have found it possible to flout the law with impunity in their formative years, they are not likely to have much respect for it as they pass into the cock-sure and aggressive period of young manhood. It has been shown that youths who had repeatedly robbed parking meters, for example, were as repeatedly released because the law itself protected them against adequate punishment.

The police have complained about this condition of affairs for a long time, but have been howled down. Now those responsible for the results should step to the front and take the blame and not try to make the police the "whipping boy" for their own mistaken theories concerning juvenile crime control.

Seize Dakar

A glance at the map plainly shows what a menace to the safety of both North and South America Dakar would become, were it in the hands of any enemy.

It is now controlled by the Vichy government and the Vichy government, with its policy of pro-Nazi "collaboration"—as clearly exemplified in the case of Syria—is to all intents and purposes already an enemy. The Germans undoubtedly have their eye on Dakar as a base for active hostilities by air and by submarines. Let America seize it—for the duration of the war—before the Germans get it.

The Robin Moor "incident" should make us see the urgent necessity of this precaution.

Filled With Pride

It was with a feeling of pride in my native State of Tennessee that I read the "Report from Putnam County" by Christine Sadler in The Post of June 18. Appearing along with reports of strikes and threatened strikes and the use of troops to insure the production of materials essential to our national defense, it was refreshing.

I can think of nothing that would do more to further our defense efforts than to have this article appear on the front page of every paper throughout the country, particularly in the industrial centers and along the West Coast.

Nonunion Workers

Apropos your editorial and sundry letters in The Post on the subject of discrimination against Negroes in national defense, permit me to invite your attention to another class who are also discriminated against, but of whom we hear nothing in the press nor from the Administration. The class referred to are nonunion workers who are denied the right of employment by the labor unions unless and until they join a union and pay dues, ofttimes exorbitant, to the racketeers who control the unions, or if they get a job and attempt to exercise their Constitutional rights of freedom of contract and God-given right and duty to work for a living for themselves and their families, are often beaten up, and have been known to be killed.

When such a condition exists, as it does, and that too with the support and encouragement of the Administration, our boast of democracy and liberty becomes a hollow mockery, and indicates a rapid approach towards the closed shop and a communistic state of society.

'Sugar Quota'

The other day The Post had an editorial on the Adams-O'Mahoney bill recently log-rolled through the Senate by the representatives of democracy from the cane and sugar beet States. Unobtrusively, deliberately, this bill was slid through the Upper House, most of whose members, it may be presumed, are giving their full efforts to the national emergency.

If this bill gets by Congress and is approved by the President, his party's policy of developing Latin-American friendship will be kicked part way down diplomatic steps. This will be the result because the bill cuts sugar producers of the southern nations from the Philippines' unfilled sugar quota.

But the President himself has declared a state of national emergency. Therefore it is to be assumed until disapproved that he will no longer allow domestic politics to disrupt the progress being made in bringing North and South America closer together.

Dogs At Large

The Post has always championed law and order and I am writing so that something may be done and done soon about the flagrant disregard of a very important law in the District. I refer to the law concerning muzzling of dogs that run at large.

I have conformed to the laws of the District—being an innocent newcomer who thought laws were supposed to be obeyed. We have our dog confined to the yard. Of late I have been put to a great deal of worry and bother by numerous dogs who come into the yard (jumping over the fence), and I'd like to see them restrained, or at least muzzled, so that they will not snap and growl at me when I try to drive them out.

Prevention is worth much, and now that the children are out of school, I do not want to have one of them bitten by a dog before the law is enforced.

District WPA Roll

The sudden decision to throw 4,000 District WPA employes into the ranks of the unemployed appears to be an uncalled-for attempt to play politics at the expense of persons guilty only of serving their country.

Skilled persons, practically all of them engaged in cultural or manual work vital to defense, are being dropped at a time when their services would seem necessary to bolster civilian and military morale. Many of them, because of specialized training, cannot hope to receive work in private employment. Worse, although certain skills have been called vital to defense, 4,000 dismissed employes will find some jobs closed to them by the questionable demands of Civil Service.

Such a situation provides propaganda for the enemy. Our Latin American neighbors will not understand this heartless and stupid dismissal of citizens in the midst of a program that should make use of every hand and skill, and enemy nations will point to such maladministration as proof that we cannot take care of our own.

Certainly, if jobs are available in the District, the 4,000 dismissed WPA employes should be given priority over the thousands of outsiders now crowding the city and environs, many of the invaders leaving former jobs at home merely to accept the higher wages prevalent in Washington.

Politics is never easy to understand, but it is harder to understand the callous dismissal of loyal and efficient employes engaged in work definitely important to defense. Is private employment prepared to place these people, or must they remain jobless—to become embittered victims of any ism that offers hope?

The Isolationists

The isolationist is trying to create a virtue of our staying out of war, when the opposite is the case. They tell you it is not our war and it is not our business when people in Europe want to fight each other. Of course this is not true. The nations of Europe were afflicted with the Nazi war by trying to stay neutral.

Appeasers in France said: "Czecho-Slovakia's trouble is her own and we had better stay out." As a result, most of the neutrals of Europe are already under the Nazi heel and are crying to great heaven for help.

The selfishness advocated by the isolationists, if allowed to prevail, would make a mockery of the lofty ideals of honesty, human decency, bravery, self-sacrifice we were brought up to admire from childhood.

We admired the Spartans who sacrificed their lives for their country's freedom; we were thrilled by the prophetic words of Patrick Henry: "Give me liberty, or give me death;" we were touched beyond words by the brave and noble deeds of great men of the past.

Yes, the advocates of the doctrine that would allow an evil spirit of oppression and destruction of human dignity to entrench itself in the world, hoping to preserve their own hides, are not only shortsighted but wicked and thoroughly immoral.

Above all else—only those who prefer to be blind cannot see that it means our own destruction to remain isolationists.

If anything would make America "Last" instead of "First," it would be for the isolationists to remain afloat on the river of Destiny of the United States of America.

The Post Impressionist

Poor Bertram

Poor Bertram, my cocker spaniel (on his mother's side), has something quite wrong with him. His uncle, Fred Farley, insists that poor Bertram is merely heartbroken because his Uncle Fred has gone away to summer school in Iowa. I am familiar with love in most of its manifestations, and I have never yet known it to result in an intense itching all over, combined with a falling out of the hair. Discounting, then, Uncle Fred's romantic diagnosis, there are two schools of thought concerning poor Bertram's ailment. One school says that he is suffering from a diet deficiency, while the other insists that he has the mange.

In spite of the fact that I feed poor Bertram Baines' Doggie Meal, which contains all the known vitamins and minerals and is highly recommended by all the dogs who made the trip to the South Pole, the diet-deficiency people insist that he hasn't been getting the right sort of food. So far, the diet-deficiency school has offered six cures:

1. Give Bertram a raw egg once a day beaten up in his milk. Bertram thinks this is a splendid idea, provided it is given to him as a between-meal snack and does not take the place of one of his regular feedings.

2. Give Bertram raw hamburger meat. Bertram thinks this is quite the most sensible suggestion to date.

3. Eliminate all meat from his diet; he is much too young to be eating meat. Bertram thinks this is nonsense. Other dogs of his age eat meat three and four times a day.

4. Feed him Purple Heart Dog Rations, which have been recommended by no less an authority than Rin-Tin-Tin. Bertram says he doesn't want to grow up to be like Rin-Tin-Tin; he wants to be like Fred Darley.

5. Don't feed him dog meal at all; it's much too rich for him. He should have nothing but warm milk. To this Bertram replies, "Liquidum non frangit jejunium," and kicks over his bowl of milk.

6. Give him a teaspoonful of cod-liver oil once a day. Bertram doesn't mind cod-liver oil, providing, of course, it's mixed in with something more substantial.

The mange people take a much more serious view of the situation. Some of them say that he has follicular mange, for which there is no cure, and I might just as well shoot him. The more optimistic members of the mange faction say that he has sarcoptic mange, which can be cured by the following treatments:

1. Wash him every day with good strong soap. Bertram objects strenuously to this.

2. Don't wash him at all; his skin is much too dry as it is. To correct this dryness, rub castor oil into the affected parts. Bertram thinks this is mildly pleasurable.

3. No wonder his hair is all falling out; they use castor oil to take warts off of horses. Wash all the castor oil off at once, while he still has a little hair left, and rub in vaseline. Bertram doesn't mind this, either, but he thinks it would be much simpler if I should just scratch him.

4. Dip him in used motor oil, to which has been added a dime's worth of powdered sulphur and a few drops of carbolic acid. This will cure mange after everything else has failed. Shortly after I applied this drastic remedy to poor Bertram, I discovered him in the living room, sitting disconsolately in a needle-point-covered chair. Now Bertram and I live on the back porch.

5. Wash him thoroughly, apply Glover's Magic Mange medicine, rubbing it in vigorously, and then wrap him up in steaming hot towels.

This last was the most spectacular treatment of all. Poor Bertram screamed like a lost soul in torment, and I was reported to the S. P. C. A. It was just after this treatment that poor Bertram left home, and I haven't seen him for four days.

Perhaps Fred Darley was right, after all, and poor Bertram has taken his broken heart up to Iowa, to see his Uncle Fred. In case he should come back uncured, however, I am preparing against his return a salve that has been highly recommended to me. It consists of lard, powdered sulphur, boric acid, tannic acid, creosote, pine tar, and turpentine, and is to be rubbed in with a stiff brush.

Or maybe he just has fleas.

'Timid Soul'

It is with no small amount of pride and satisfaction that I as an American see ship after ship slide down the ways, factory after factory (rearmament) completed, airplane after airplane leap into the sky, taking off as one pilot expressed it "like scalded cats," and tank after tank rumble out of the mass production lines—all way ahead of schedule.

I read, also with pride, that my country has the highest standard of living in the world, its workers are the best paid, its children and its students have the highest I.Q.'s. But what I can't understand, and I wish you would please explain, is how your newspaper columnists, with but few exceptions, can one day learnedly discuss military and naval strategy of any country in any part of the world and the next day tell us all about the problems of, let us say, some labor leader in Podunk, Idaho, Nevada, California, or what have you.

Furthermore, if some mere mortal would venture a feeble and timid doubt about their respective qualifications to cover those two plus the host of subjects they discuss that lie between the above-mentioned, they would tear him to pieces and toss him to the vultures with their pens.

I'm one of those "timid souls" so please put this where they can see it, even though I sometimes wonder if they do read anything beyond their own respective columns.

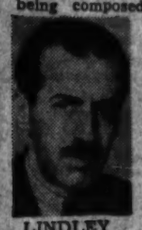
Defense Production

By Ernest K. Lindley

Taking Up The Slack



LINDLEY

AFTER MONTHS of controversy in the defense agencies, some of the differences are at last being composed between those who have been fairly well satisfied with the progress of defense production and those who have not.

This has been the core of a conflict which often has been described as between the dollar-a-year business men as Donald Nelson and William L. Batt have been in the forefront of the critics, while some of the New Dealers have clung so tightly to their pet reforms, regardless of their effect on defense production, that they must be put in the "business as usual" class.

By comparison with what could have been done in any other country in the same length of time, and even with our effort in World War I, the progress of the first year of defense production has been extremely impressive. But even those who like to dwell on this accomplishment now concede that the rate of production can and must be steppd up far beyond that which they originally contemplated.

Thus belatedly the impatient critics are beginning to have their way.

THE SIMPLEST GAUGE of the slack in defense production is the fact that on the average the machine tools in the country are working only ten hours a day. This is for defense and civilian production combined. Twenty hours a day is considered the practical maximum for efficient use. So that machine tools are being used at only 50 per cent of capacity.

OPM officials hope to get the average up to 15 hours a day within four months. In the meantime new machine tools are being turned out in record-breaking quantities, and old machine tools are being shifted from civilian to defense production.

The three obvious ways of increasing machine tool use are:

1. Extra shifts and overtime work in plants which already have contracts.

2. Subcontracting to plants now idle or engaged in civilian production.

3. Buying or commandeering machine tools and placing them where they will be used effectively.

The idle tools which the Army wants the power to commandeer are mostly held in storage for speculative profit. But the protests coming in to Congress reveal the fear of small manufacturers that they will be stripped of key machine tools, and so be forced to close up. This fear finds support in the Army's attitude toward subcontracting, which until recently was lethargic, to say the least. Now, at the direction of the President, the Army is actively encouraging subcontracting.

SUBCONTRACTING offers the biggest field for expansion because usually the skilled labor is already on hand. Moreover, with the growing shortages of metals for civilian use, many small plants must get defense orders or shut down.

To force subcontracting and the organization of extra shifts, defense officials are now agreed that at least two pressures must be applied. Orders must be piled on so that manufacturers will know, as Undersecretary of War Patterson put it, that there will be plenty of wood to saw for a long time to come. Secondly, contracts must be renegotiated to advance the dates of delivery. Manufacturers who can meet their delivery dates lack the incentive to subcontract or to work overtime or put on extra shifts. They are penalized if they fall behind, but get no bonus if they complete their work ahead of time.

The traditional competitive bidding system of the Army and Navy works against speed. The lowest bidder may not be able to do the work in the least time. Subcontracting often—usually after a certain point—adds to the costs. To get maximum output in the shortest time, the Government must make greater use of negotiated contracts, with allowances for the costs of overtime and of subcontracting to less efficient producers.

The success of these methods of taking up the slack cannot be measured for several months yet. The encouraging fact is that the need for them is now generally recognized in the defense agencies, and that they are being applied—if not energetically, at least on a broadening scale.

"Bushido" In China

By Wilbur Burton

Japanese Racketeering

BACK IN 1900 when the powers now both Axis and anti-Axis sent an expeditionary force to lift the Boxer siege of Peking, the Japanese were so punctilious in their behavior—compared to the Germans, for example—that they were assigned to guarding Chinese Christian girls.

But when the Japanese took Nanking in 1938—with the Chinese passively accepting the new invader with ancient fatalism, and even waving homemade Rising Sun flags to indicate surrender—there followed the greatest orgy of rape, looting and slaughter in modern annals. Not less than 10,000 girls, according to the most conservative estimates, were raped—and hundreds were disemboweled afterward. Other murders, in virtually all cases without any warrant whatsoever, ran into the tens of thousands. It was a running amuck probably not matched even by the conquering hordes of Tamerlane.

In 1904, when the Japanese first invaded Manchuria (in the Russo-Japanese war) they astonished the Chinese of the area by two things: the amount of water they required for bathing, and the fact that they paid for labor in valid currency at a little better than prevailing civic wages, whereas native warlord custom was to conscript workers and then shoot them if they even dared to suggest recompense.

But the upwards of 2,000,000 Japanese soldiers who now overrun China from the Amur to the Pearl River are short on bathing and long on forced labor. In every place they occupy, Chinese labor gangs of from scores to thousands are under draft at bare sustenance, while virtually every one of the Mikado's warriors from private to general is engaged in so varied and extensive "squeeze" that the whole occupation seems simply a gargantuan Al Capone racket.

SUCH IS the course of that "bushido" code of chivalry that the spokesmen of Dai Nippon vaunt as the basis of the New Order of Co-Prosperity in East Asia.

This pronounced change in bearing and morale dates from the Battle of Nanking, although there were evidences of it before that. Still in 1931, however, when the writer saw Japanese troops occupying Mukden, Manchuria, they largely lived up to tradition in being both spick-and-span and conducting themselves with elan. Generally, too, in the early years of the Manchuria occupation, they were certainly no worse and in some ways probably better than the Chinese warlords who had preceded them. Indeed, a common Chinese mass idea was that choice between Japanese and native rule was a sort of frying-pan versus the fire proposition.

It was this attitude that caused the Nanking population to greet the invaders—apathetically, to be sure—with home-made Rising Sun flags; and it was the subsequent orgy of rape, murder and looting that steeled the soul of China to the mass resistance that has astonished the world for over three years.

For the story of Nanking was spread on sibilants of wrath from one end of the country to the other—and confirmed wherever the Rising Sun flag was planted, even though the high command did not permit another quite so sensational spectacle. But "squeeze" which made former native warlord exactions seems amateurish became everywhere the prime prop of the New Order.

Japanese racketeering in opium, gambling and prostitution has been rather too well publicized, for this has tended to obscure the more ruthless levying on the everyday necessities of life. Approximately exact figures for Shanghai will illustrate. Half of the current cost of food there is due to Japanese military racketeering. This is according to statistics compiled by the Shanghai municipal council, but never officially made public because of political reasons. The way it works out is that everything coming into the city from the countryside passes through Japanese lines, where sentries collect according to a more or less fixed scale: $25 (Shanghai currency) for every cow, $5 to $7 on every pig, $10 on every sheep, $25 on every truckload of vegetables.

IT IS NOT POSSIBLE for an individual, even an American, to go outside the Japanese lines and bring back produce at the prices the peasants are only too glad to sell it for. In the case of foreigners, it can't be brought through the lines—for the Japanese sentry somehow figures that is an affront to the Emperor. In two cases known to the writer, thrifty American housewives bought eggs on a road outside the Shanghai International Settlement from peasant women at about half the price charged in the city shops—but sentries who searched the cars and found the "bootleg" eggs broke them on the roadside.

Rice—which provides the average central and southern Chinese with about four-fifths of his total intake of calories—is hardest hit of all by Japanese military racketeering. In this there is a two-way "squeeze." For two years there has been an abnormal rice shortage in Japan, and so the army has bought up large quantities of rice with their own made-for-China virtually worthless yen to export to Japan for real yen—which has been fine business for the generals. Meanwhile rice permitted to the Chinese is levied upon at from 50 to 100 per cent ad valorem.

It is axiomatic to Chinese and foreigners alike that nothing ever passes (save by smuggling) through a Japanese line without an exaction upon it; at the same time, everything may pass—including military supplies to Chungking—if enough "squeeze" is paid. Permits—with payment of fees—are required to travel. All exports and shipping are sources of "squeeze"—entirely aside from legally established dues. Foreign ships are not allowed to operate on the Yangtsze River, but Japanese ships do and foreigners are allowed to use them for transport—at from one-third to one half more than Japanese pay. Thus, in one specific example, the Japanese are able to sell products of the American Standard Oil Co. in Hankow for less than Standard Oil can.

JAPANESE BUSINESSMEN are profiting some from all this, but little compared to the army. All Japanese companies that have started up in the wake of the occupation are either outright army-organized or have army officers as major shareholders. Another common racket is for an army officer to calmly declare himself a partner in some small Chinese business firm (such as a restaurant) and thenceforth collect half the profits without making any contribution to either the capital or the management.

It is only historically accurate—and fair—to say that "squeeze" has always been characteristic of China—but the Japanese exactions are far heavier than ever existed under the worst of native warlords. And where native warlords used to conscript labor without wages for only a few days at a time, the Japanese hold workers for months—sometimes sending them to distant parts of the country. Everywhere down the line of ordinary life it is the same story: brutality and rapacity without parallel in the long and often tragic annals of Cathay.

For the Japanese, the racketeering is so profitable that many observers wonder if the army could be sent home even if peace were attained. Every army unit in the occupied area is now virtually a law unto itself, with everyone from private to officer sharing in the spoils—and none wants to be recalled.

Thus, in a specific recent instance, there was an order from Peking to a unit in a nearby village to go elsewhere. Whereupon the unit made a deal with a small Chinese bandit band to stage an attack; the attack, of course, was easily repulsed, but it provided an excuse to cancel the order for recall of the troops. So the unit stayed on, paying a small part of their "squeeze" to the "bandits" who "made necessary" the continued occupation of the area.

Hitler's New Tack

By Mark Sullivan

The True Course For America

TO MOST AMERICANS, Hitler's attack on Russia will be confusing. It will take days for this country even to recognize the new problems, to arrive at the policies that will be imperatively necessary.

SULLIVAN

But the largest aspect of the new picture is clear. Hitler's attack will have an instant effect on two American groups. Each group will be instantly busy to bend the country and the Government to its purpose.

One group is the American radicals, including many so-called liberals—the radical labor leaders and the academic intellectuals who compose the left-wing of American politics.

Within an hour after Russia was attacked, the first anguished scream from Moscow was a radio appeal to "workers and intellectuals" everywhere. That was an appeal, among others, to the American left wing, and the American left wing will strive to have America respond.

The left wing was dominant in our politics until two years ago, the war in Europe divided it. It will now be united again. It will know exactly what it wants. It will press its purpose immediately, and aggressively.

PRECEDING AUGUST, 1939, the American left-wing included almost the whole gamut from Communist to liberal. They worked together in the spirit of what they called the "popular front." They supported most of the innovations in society and government that were pressed upon America. The recognition of Russia in 1938 pleased them and expressed their wish. To some of them, Russia was a conscious model. Some went no farther than to say that some features of the Russian experiment could be modified and adopted in America. All were sympathetic to the Russian experiment.

But when, at the outbreak of the war, Stalin united with Hitler, the American left-wing split in two. The formal and orthodox Communists followed the party line. To them, whatever Stalin did, was law and morals and religion. The other branch of the American left-wing put detestation of Hitler above everything else. Between the two branches of the American left-wing there came disunion.

Now they will come together. Their common purpose will have America give every possible help to Stalin, not merely help for Stalin's military resistance to Hitler, but help for the Communist ideology. They will try to have us take to Russia the same relation that we have to Britain, or even closer alliance.

THERE IS another group that will seek advantage from the country's bewilderment and hesitation. These are the ones who have long opposed our intervention in the war, our uniting with Britain to oppose Hitler. These will say, in justificatoin of their past attitude, "See where your opposition to Hitler has led you—it has led you into comradeship with Russia."

They will say that our help to Britain has led us logically into the position of help to Russia. They will say we should now cease our help to Britain, lest our help to Britain become a help to communism. They will renew their demand for isolation. They will seek to make the country ignore the fact that Hitler is as odious today as he was yesterday, as much a menace to American ideals of liberty, just as much to be resisted by America.

The true course for America is not to be rushed into any course, to avoid being headlong in any respect. There are other courses than extremists suggest. And there will be other emergencies.

For Hitler's adventure is like Napoleon's. It is a world war in which, as in the Napoleonic period, the alignment fluctuates, nations from time to time change sides. Already in this Hitler war, Vichy France and Russia have changed sides. No one can predict what future alignments may take place. Through it all, opposition to what Hitler stands for will provide a permanent pattern of principle. That broad, eternal principle will give us a guide for whatever action we should take now.

High-Altitude Planes Groomed For New 'Battle Of Britain'

London, June 22 (AP).—New fighting planes will carry air warfare six miles above the blistered countryside of Britain and the continent in another great trial of air strength this summer, air observers are predicting.

High-speed bombers and long-range fighters capable of operating at 30,000 feet or more are seen as deciding factors in the expected repetition of last summer's battle of Britain.

The Luftwaffee will offer its newest challenge to the R. A. F., observers say, in the Messerschmitt 109-F, a highly specialized high-altitude fighter. The new Messerschmitt is planned to solve the problem of protecting bombers—the problem which stumped the German air force last summer.

It is against this new Nazi fighter that the British are planning their summer defense.

Aviation experts declare that, given sufficient quantities of the Messerschmitt 109-F, the Luftwaffe would be able again to attempt a frontal attack on Britain by day.

Air observers say this new type of German fighter cannot be minimized, and the British are giving thought to this summer's successors for the Spitfires and Hurricanes which saved England in the summer of 1940.

The British answer to the threat will be two-fold, it is said:

1. Development of new defensive aircraft like the Typhoon, with emphasis on level speed, climbing speed and, above all, altitude. The plane which achieves the greater height enjoys an enormous tactical advantage in air warfare, because it can select its own moment for attack. Up to now, the Spitfires have been able to catch and engage the fastest German bombers, but development of the Typhoon is insurance against the appearance of new high-altitude bombers.

2. Development of high-speed, high-altitude British fighters to convoy new long-range bombers on sorties over Germany both by day and by night. Aviation circles long have believed that the combatant who first gains and maintains control of the air by day will win the air war.

"I see Victor Mature has fallen."

"Is that so? Well, I'm glad to see the British get a break.

"It was one of those sudden dashes from El Tobruk."

"There's been a lot of hard fighting around Bordagarian, Rizzuto, Billy Conn, Navicert and DiMaggio, I see by the papers."

"They're still holding out, though. What's the latest from Syria?"

"Who?"

"Syria. You know; that Egyptian place."

"Oh, yeah. All I know is that the Australians took El Morocco."

"Gen. Zam Zam is certainly putting up a swell fight."

"But I thought he and that feller Damascus would have the Beirut Islands in their hands before this."

"Well, the dust storms are pretty tough. And Petain is using that new device."

"What new device?"

"It freezes assets or something."

"How is Darlan doing."

It's still holding out against everything the Sheik Miskin and all them Druzzes can do."

"What do you know about all them German consuls being ordered to stop driving autos on Sunday to save oil and gas?"

"It's a good thing. I think we should make the Japs and Italians stay home weekends, too, in America if we need the gasoline for war."

"Is there any truth in the story that Russia and Germany are going to fight each other?"

"All I know is what I heard on Gabriel Williams' radio program."

"That's the one on which Wyeth Heatter sings, ain't it?"

"Yeah. Well, he said Russia and Germany might fight because Hitler was massing troops near Pepsi-cola and was demanding that Stalin give him the right to cross into Kreml."

"Stalin is pretty suspicious of Ankara, ain't he?

"What Ankara is that?"

"The one that attacked the Robin Solum off Damascus during the debate on the airplane strike at Cyprus."

"I heard Raymond Gram Lowell explain the crisis, but all I remember is that nothing will happen unless El Kuneitra acts."

"Who is El Kuneitra?"

"He's the Japanese Premier."

"I'm sick of war. Let's talk about something else. Did you read about Martha Frazier marrying Addis Ababa?"

"No. You've got it mixed up. She's engaged to Shipwreck Mature."

"Brenda Kemp!"

Russia In The War

By Barnet Nover

The Spreading Conflict

THE WAR which Adolf Hitler unleashed in September, 1939, and which, at the outset, he hoped to confine to Poland now extends over a greater area than has ever before been involved in simultaneous conflict. To a greater or lesser extent every nation inhabiting the globe is involved in the struggle, while the field of battle stretches out from the western Atlantic across the continents of Europe and Asia to the eastern Pacific, from the Arctic to the Antipodes.

NOVER

This is hardly what Hitler had bargained for when he gave marching orders to the German army 22 months ago. Certainly he could not have anticipated this would be the situation exactly a year after the fall of France. Then a German victory seemed a matter of weeks. The German Wehrmacht had crushed all resistance on the continent. Only Great Britain was left and few there were who were convinced that she could long hold out. And despite the fierce battering the Luftwaffe has administered to British cities, harbors and population, despite the strangling effect of the German counter-blockade on British shipping, Great Britain has not given up and shows not the least inclination to give up.

IF HITLER is to win he must smash British resistance. That can only be done either by a direct onslaught on an unexampled scale or by a long continued war of attrition. The former would be fatal to the Reich unless success were certain. Hitler for all his surface recklessness is an essentially cautious man. He daren't risk everything on one throw of the dice. And the circumstance that the British are even more in control of the air over their islands than they were last summer and have even begun to extend that air mastery to the Channel and the French coast, indicates that an invasion attempt might prove disastrous.

On the other hand, a war of attrition is at best a slow business. And there is no certainty that sooner or later the weapon would not be turned against Germany. For while Great Britain can command the resources of the overseas world, provided she has the shipping, Germany must depend entirely on the resources of a continent which is not self-contained and which harbors millions of individuals bitterly hostile to the Third Reich.

There is, however, an alternative to an all-out victory which, at the moment, would suit Hitler's purposes very well. That alternative is a negotiated settlement in which he would be permitted to keep his gains while Great Britain would be allowed to retain her empire. Since October 6, 1939, Hitler has repeatedly indicated that he is willing to talk peace on some such terms. But, unlike our defeatists and appeasers, the British leaders have not been fooled. They know that a truce would only be to Hitler's advantage, enabling him to secure a respite for the building up of his forces. They know that these forces once built up would again be employed for conquest. So they have preferred to fight it out.

WITH ALL THIS in mind the sudden German assault on Russia, which seems maniacal at first glance, takes on real meaning. The statements of Hitler and Ribbentrop make clear what was long suspected, that the Russo-German agreement of August 23, 1939, was only an armistice in the struggle between the two countries. So far as Russia was concerned it was, as was pointed out here the other day, another Munich settlement which only put off the inevitable showdown. Actually the very paucity of evidence presented by the Nazis in support of their charge of Russia's bad faith and her aggressive designs on the Reich prove that the last thing Stalin wanted was war. The indications all are that he desperately sought to avoid it.

The concessions which the Kremlin made to Germany, however, were not sufficient to insure a German victory. Economic collaboration, for instance, did not enable Germany to offset the strangling effects of the British blockade. The activities of British and American Communists, in the one case to force their government to sue for peace, in the other to hamper the defense program and bar the path to a policy of all-out to Britain, proved of only limited value to Hitler.

To win the war Hitler has again found it necessary to extend it. This is the fourth time that has happened. First he spread the war to the Scandinavian area, later to the Low Countries, still later to the Balkans. Now it is Russia's turn.

THE ASSAULT on Russia has three objectives. The least important, perhaps, although it has been most publicized, is economic. Undoubtedly Hitler can make good use of the wheat and metals and oil of Russia, particularly of the Ukraine and the Caucasus. But to capitalize the conquest of those areas effectively time will be needed and the longer it would take the less time would be Hitler's ally and the more it would become his enemy.

A more important reason for the spread of the war to Russia is that an all-out offensive against Great Britain would today require far more men, planes and supplies than might have been necessary a year ago. In other words, Hitler cannot afford to keep an uncertain Russia on Germany's flank since, if an attempted invasion did not come off, Germany would have to reckon with a Russian attack. On the other hand, if Germany should win her struggle with Russia and the odds are definitely in her favor, her conquest would nonetheless immobilize a considerable number of men. Yet the number required for garrisoning duty would undoubtedly be fewer than the number of troops the Reich has found it advisable to keep along the Russian frontier hitherto.

The third objective, least ponderable and probably the most potent, is to stir into renewed life on Germany's behalf all the latent and active anti-Bolshevist sentiment which exists not only in countries taken over by Russia or which have lost territory to the Soviet but also in enemy and neutral lands. The Nazi leaders are men of the utmost cynicism. They know that intelligent men and women will scoff at their claim of being defenders of civilization against bolshevism. Everything the Nazis have done, all that they are, everything they stand for is destructive of civilization. But there are dupes and ignoramuses and mental weaklings who, despite everything that has happened in the last years, will still be inclined to take Hitler at his face value. To all such the ringing declaration of Winston Churchill that Great Britain will never make peace with Hitler was particularly addressed. Britain's war leader has scotched Hitler's contemplated peace offensive at birth.

Russo-German War Injects New Complication for Congress

In an atmosphere complicated by the new Russo-German war, Congress last night prepared to clear up all remaining appropriation bills this week and act on legislation to curb Communist and other radical minorities in American labor.

Most of the week will be given over to consideration of the conference reports on appropriation bills which have already passed both houses and in passing the deficiency appropriation bill which must get through both houses by the beginning of the new fiscal year, July 1. But there also may be time for preliminary debate on three of the most controversial issues of the current session—the Vinson and Connolly bills, both of which seek to legislate against strikes in defense industries, and the property seizure bill.

The first reaction at the Capitol last night was that Russia's entrance into the war might minimize Communist opposition to the defense program and relieve the labor situation to such an extent that antistrike legislation would at least be postponed. However, Administration leaders were perturbed by a tendency among some members to say that the war in the East was a great relief and that even if Britain had pledged aid to the Soviet, the United States should have nothing to do with the Communists.

Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, called upon all members of Congress to "rise above the hysteria of the moment" and defeat both the Vinson and Connally legislation.

The Vinson bill, he said, deprives labor of its right to strike for a 30-day period, regardless of the circumstances, and in effect "establishes compulsory arbitration." The Connally amendment to the Conscription Act as revised by the House Military Affairs Committee, according to Murray, "is a vicious antilabor proposal which would make it a criminal act to strike in defense industry and, together with the Vinson bill, clamps upon the total American economy a rigid status of forced labor."

Murray sent a letter to each member of Congress calling on them not to pass these bills. "Enactment of this or any other repressive legislation, undermining the free existence of trade unions and depriving them of their bargaining weapons," he said, "would weaken the strongest forces for democracy in this country and would shatter the morale and security of those who produce most of the defense materials."

It is doubtful if the Property Seizure Bill will come up this week but even last night some members of Congress were saying that the Russian diversion had eased the general situation and that this legislation should be defeated.

Some strong Administration supporters were calling for United States aid to Russia, economic, technical and military, but there is strong opposition to such a policy. The Administration it is thought can find ways to evade the Communist controversy by continuing to aid Britain, which is now pledged in turn to help the Soviet.

West Washington Baptist Pastor Submits Program

Plans for future years of religious activity were proposed last night to the congregation of West Washington Baptist Church, by the Rev. Charles B. Austin as the church completed its week-long diamond jubilee fete.

Preaching on "Facing the Future," Mr. Austin, who has served as pastor for 19 years, proposed a "soul-winning campaign" to recruit 50 new church members, a program to enlarge the Sunday school and an eight-month church loyalty crusade.

The Rev. William R. Flannagan, West Washington pastor from 1917 to 1922, preached the morning sermon on "The Challenge of the Hour." He was presented by former Assistant District Postmaster W. Hunter Haychock, who has been a member of the church for 57 years.

Parties in Country Popular Over Weekend

The combination of clear skies and a heat wave over the weekend had everybody going out of town—or at least as far as the nearest garden, anyway. From the number of parties given, you would never have thought that the summer social slump was anywhere near.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson were hosts at a pleasant outdoor luncheon at Charmian, their home in Blue Ridge Summit, Pa. Several friends were stopping with them for the weekend, among them the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora Martins. Mr. Culbertson was at one time United States Ambassador to Chile.

The Culbertsons follow the pleasant custom of inviting their friends to drive up for Sunday, and there's always room for another place at their weekend luncheons. Among the other guests yesterday were Gen. and Mrs. Russell Maxwell, Gen. and Mrs. John Ely, the former Financial Counselor of the Rumanian legation and Mme. Boncesco, and Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price. Two of the Culbertson daughters, Jane and Josephine, also have joined their parents at Charmian.

Hohenlohes' Sunday Parties Popular

Sundays at the farm of Prince and Princess Hohenlohe, near Ellicott City, Md., are rapidly becoming a Washington institution. Nearly every week they hold open house for their friends. Several drove out for luncheon yesterday, among them the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Senhora de Gouthier and Jose de Lasa, Attache of the Cuban Embassy.

Other Washingtonians motored in the opposite direction yesterday afternoon to attend the cocktail party given by Miss Edith Huntington at Journey's End, the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington. The house sits on a mountain top in the Blue Ridge, and from the wide veranda there's a magnificent view of the green valley below. Miss Huntington's party was in honor of Miss Peggy Burke, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Burke, of Washington, who is visiting her. The two girls made their debuts together last Christmas.

Another Virginia party over the weekend was the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Richardson for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock. They entertained on Saturday at their home, Rose Cottage. The Krocks recently bought and remodeled Glenwood, an old home on the Shenandoah River, and are being widely entertained by the Virginia residents.

Among the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richardson were Mr. and Mrs. William B. Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. Percy C. Randolph, Capt. and Mrs. Ewart Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jenkins and Mr. and Mrs. Alexis Somaripa. Mr. Richardson, who is a Yale graduate, class of 1901, attended his reunion in New Haven last week, and later went on to Chicago for a brief stay.

Cocktail Party Given By Miss Barry

Here in Washington, among the parties held over the week-end was Miss Alice Barry's cocktail gathering on Saturday afternoon. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet, Nelson Aldrich, Miss Mary Wright, and dozens more. Miss Wright, who has a job as translator in the Government, will be here the entire summer, as her office is not being allowed leaves.

Miss Barry expects to leave early in July for Nonquitt, Mass., to spend the summer. Interesting news from that Buzzards Bay region is the announcement by Mrs. Demarest Lloyd of the engagement of her daughter, Angelica, to Peter McDonald, son of Mrs. Morgan Plummer, of South Dartmouth, Mass. Mrs. Lloyd and Angelica are now at their summer home, Potomska, near New Bedford, and the wedding will take place there August 2.

Miss Lloyd made her debut here several seasons ago at a dance at her mother's home on R Street. She is a member of the Junior League. Mr. McDonald studied at the Holderness School, Plymouth, N. H.; Phillips Exeter Academy and the University of Virginia. He is now in business in Boston.

Among the guests will be several girls who will be presented to society next winter. The young hostess will wear an aquamarine dress appliqued with white linen flowers, and a white hat, and Miss Hill will wear a green and white print with a hat of natural straw.

The guests will include the Misses Josephine and Florence Henderson, Mariana Evans, Elene Essary, Agnes Flather, Patricia Herbst, Patricia Kyle, Alice and Stratton Nicholson, Audrey Cowan, Suzanne Slingluff, Margaret Boteler, Evelina Van Meter, Madeleine Carry, Janet Clapper, Betty Anne Swagart, Mary Ellen Brown, Kay Kenner, Barbara Johnston, Cissie Newhauser, Mary Mitchel, Kathleen Duncan Suzanne Masten, Eleanor Neill, Mary Helen Davison, Betty Frost, Dorothy Drayton, Margaret Slaughter, Mary Johansen, Marjorie Gessford, Mary Lane Latimer, Mary Teresa and Marion Norris, and Suzanne and Tudor Morsell.

Hicks–Storm Engagement Is Announced

At a party yesterday afternoon in Englewood, N. J., announcement was made of an engagement which is of wide interest to Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Henry Storm of that city entertained for their daughter, Miss Jacquette Storm, who will be married to Frederick Stevens Hicks, son of Mrs. Macneil of Barra and the late Frederick Cocks Hicks, former representative from Long Island.

Miss Storm attended the Dwight School in Englewood and the Mary Wheeler School in Providence, R. I. She is now a junior at Smith College.

The prospective bridegroom attended St. Alban's School, Washington, is a graduate of the Kent School, and is a junior at the University of Virginia. He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta, the Farmington Club of Charlottesville, and the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club of Oyster Bay, Long Island.

Mr. Hick's great-great-great-grandfather, Commodore Stevens, died while in command of the Washington Navy Yard. The house which Mrs. Macneil of Barra built here 10 years ago, at 2211 Thirtieth Street Northwest, now occupied by the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, is built on a part of the original grant of land to another forbear, Col. Ninian Beall, who was at the head of navigation of the Potomac River.

Mr. Hicks is a grandson of the late Maj. Pierre Stevens, U. S. A., retired, and through his father is descended from John Hicks, one of the earliest English settlers of Long Island, who under the Dutch Control was active in securing the patent of Hempstead from the Indians. He was the senior of the two representatives elected to represent Hempstead at the first general assembly held in Hartford in 1664. Through his mother the prospective bridegroom is descended from Elder William Brewster, moving spirit of the pilgrim band on the Mayflower.

The former Mrs. Hicks was married several years ago to the Mcneil of Barra of Scotland. She now divides her time between Sherwood, Sands Point, Long Island, and Washington.

Diplomats and Senators Attend Party at Mrs. McLean's Home

Diplomats and Senators gathered at Mrs. Edward Beale McLean's home, Friendship, last evening for another in her series of pleasant Sunday dinners.

A center of attention were the Finnish Minister and Mme. Procope. Germany's declaration of war on Russia; and Winston Churchill's announcement yesterday that England would aid the Soviet, is putting some Washington diplomatic families in a rather complicated position. Finland, of course, is aiding Germany in this war, and Mme. Procope is English, so it's all another example of the strange situations which the war has created along Washington's diplomatic row.

Guests were seated at several flower decorated tables last evening, and afterwards they adjourned to the sun porch to see a new movie.

Among others in the company of 80 were the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann, Senator and Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney, Senator Theodore Green, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator and Mrs. John A. Danaher, Senator Joseph Guffey, Senator and Mrs. Hiram Johnson, Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Senator Happy Chandler, Representative Katharine Byron, Representative Albert Thomas, Representative and Mrs. A. S. Mike Monroney, Representative James Barnes, Representative Lawrence Lewis, Gen. Allen Gullion, Gen. and Mrs. Russell Maxwell, Mrs. George T. Pettengill, the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis and William Elmslie.

Also Homer Cummings, Harry Shaffer, Col. James W. Flanagan, who is visiting Senator and Mrs. Pepper; former Governor and Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Charles Michaelson, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, James Cromwell, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waldrop, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donnell, George Vournas, Mrs. George Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Boyer, Henry Ashhurst, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, Dr. Eugene de Savitsch, Mr. and Mrs. David Houston, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt, Howard Railey, Samuel Reber, Mr. and Mrs. Fartain Lanier, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Bloedorn, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Dr. Esther Richards, of Baltimore, and Thomas Bell Sweeney.

Sun Glasses Should Suit Shape Of Face and Occasion of Wear

Harlequin sun glasses, like the ones Actress Fay Emerson holds above, will be your type if you have a full lace with soft features. A slender face with sharp features is enhanced by the plainer, more conservative style of glasses. No matter what type you choose, make certain they are of good grade glass without inferior blemishes

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

SUN GLASSES have come into their own in Washington for their practical protective features. A few years ago they were more a fad than a necessity, but today, with light colored buildings and concrete pavements reflecting the sun's glare, women are realizing the comfort features of colored spectacles.

A local optometrist says ordinary sun glasses are better than none at all. He advises it is wiser however, to pay a little more in the long view. Less expensive glasses are not as carefully turned out and may have waves or other defect and many times the wearer suffers more discomfort from the glasses than from the sun.

Allergy To Color

Inferior grade glass is not the only thing for which to guard against in buying sun glasses. Although the sea green shades are preferred because they take the heat rays from the sun, greens may not be the shade best suited to the wearer. And there is such a thing as being allergic to certin colors, the optometrist pointed out. If one color does not agree with you, change to another. Ill-fitting fancy rims also may cause irritation. It is best to choose conservative shapes.

Since sun glasses call attention to the features, if you wear unusual shapes be certain you are the type for them. Harlequin glasses are attractive if you have a full face as they raise the contours. They are very uncomplimentary to the person with a narrow face, however, as the features are lengthened.

It is suggested that sun glasses harmonize with the features, rather than contrast with them. A certain style called "face form,' wide at the edges and cut in at the nose and cheek, blends well into the face.

For Beach Wear

There are other styles, wide at sides with wide rims, but they are considered the more bizarre types for beach wear.

For driving on pavements or sea trips, where there is a wide expanse of reflected glare, the so-called "polaroid" type glasses with the curved lenses are recommended. From 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. these special glasses will be benedcial. After 4 p. m., if glasses are needed, a good grade of colored sun glass is practical.

Now the first time you don a pair of sun glasses and sally forth with your identity concealed behind your new eyes, don't feel chagrined if asked, "From whom are you hiding?" Just remember that the Eskimos have been wearing sun glasses of the whale bone variety for years.

Mary Haworth's Mail

What Can Be Done to Help Child, 8, Who Takes Money From Teacher's Desk, Telling Parents That She Found Some Coins and Others Were Given Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three years ago, I married a man with two small daughters. I have grown to like them very much and they seem to like me, too. Their father and I give them as much as our budget will allow. Two and often three times a week, they have some change to spend—and this brings me to a problem that is worrying me considerably.

The older girl, now 8 years of age, started bringing money home. When I asked her where she got it, she would say either that someone had given it to her or that she had found it. Once, she brought home some change, saying that a little girl had given it to her. The next day, I met the child at school and asked her if this was true. She denied it. But my daughter, who was with me, still insisted the child had given it to her.

By close questioning, I found that she had been taking money from the teacher's desk. And today, she brought home some important papers from the teacher's desk. I learned from the younger girl that the teacher had asked the class if anyone had seen the papers. What shall I do? Her father will not cooperate with me. All this time he has not said anything to her. Yet I feel it is more his place to correct her than it is mine. Am I right?

He told her, in my absence, that if she would tell him the truth, he would not tell me. But later he did tell me. And he didn't get the truth out of her. Any advice you can give me—as soon as possible—will be appreciated.

STEPMOTHER.

Child Is Starving For Reassurance

DEAR S. M.: Stealing, on the part of a child so young, in materially comfortable circumstances, is interpreted by psychologists as a symptom of personality distress—which must not be ignored; yet which probably cannot be helpfully treated by so-called "punishment." When symptoms of personality distress in a child take the form of antisocial behavior, such as stealing or lying, the psychologist immediately scents trouble (for the child) in the area of his intimate human relationships.

For the young child, all his important human relationships are incorporated in the family circle. And if he is secure in these affiliations; if his inner needs of love, encouragement, appreciation and harmonious companionship with his parents and brothers or sisters are satisfied, he feels safe within himself—and he has no "symptoms." He may misbehave on occasion, matching his will against family rule—but if he is essentially happy, contented and secure, he responds favorably to parental chastising. He "takes his medicine" and the episode is closed.

However, the child with neurotic symptoms—such as lying, stealing, emotional upheavals including stomach sickness or acute jealousy or anxiety, habitual fantastic tale-telling, etc.—cannot be argued, scolded or "punished" into more desirable behavior. Rather, punishment applied to such a child is calculated to aggravate his problem and its symptoms; and if long continued, may do ruinous damage to his personality.

We must assume of your elder daughter that she is having (or has had) serious hitherto unsuspected difficulties in th realm of her emotional experiences and family relationships. What these difficulties are (or were) it is impossible to guess, without studying the child and reviewing her social history. The difficulty may trace back to her relationship with her own mother—or to the severance, by death or divorce, of that relationship. Or it may inhere in her current relationship with her father, or with you; or, perhaps, to some violently disturbed reaction to the new parental set-up. Inasmuch as your husband fails, or refuses, to "cooperate" with you in meeting this problem, it may be that you and he operate at cross purposes in other matters, too, with a resultant friction that is having a grievous effect upon his elder daughter.

But whether you get along well or ill, you and he need special assistance in meeting your parental responsibility in this instance, quite as much as the child needs scientific, sympathetic handling if she is to recover her emotional equilibrium and be reclaimed from her unhappy tendency toward outlaw behavior. And an immediately available source of help is the Child Guidance Clinic of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia Road Northwest; telephone Adams 1033. M. H.

Woman Willl Be Heard On Subject of Sin

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When letters are sent you they should be either published as they are or not at all. To alter them in any important detail is hardly fair to the writer. When I wrote you with regard to "H. O." and his dilemma, the most important point was omitted by you; the fact that this girl was not at all what she had represented herself to be and that he had a perfect right therefore to withdraw from the false position she had placed him in.

My criticism of your attitude, too, you glossed over somewhat by your omission of my reference to your "Mama held up her finger at Mary" casualness in what I think we must all rightly regard as sin. My designation of this girl's lapse was just that, and I pointed out that no grown woman in this present world could fail to know that she was certainly sinning, and it is a pity to minimize the offense.

If you do not care to publish any letter sent you that is your privilege, but I consider it a liberty to make vital changes in a letter and then put the sender's initials to it, whether or not you like the changes. M. A. B.

The Onerous Duty Of Any Editor

DEAR M. A. B.: It seems you don't know the difference between an edited and an "altered" manuscript. No "important detail" was "altered" in your letter published June 18. Rather, a few fuzzy redundancies (totally irrelevant to the essential question) were blue penciled, to conserve space, clarify the text and emphasize the constructive opinion I gave you credit for trying to formulate, namely: that chastity is not only feasible for women, but absolutely synonymous with self-respect, happiness, man's esteem and successful marriage.

Since coherency, brevity and restraint would naturally strengthen what of value you had to say, the condensation was all in your favor. The chore of grooming slipshod writing for publication is not so much the willful pleasure as it is the onerous duty of any editor. And the article that isn't improved by being pared to bedrock reflects more discredit upon its author than the editor.

I am sorry, for your sake, that you insist upon presenting yourself primarily in the guise of a verbose, complacently uncharitable busybody, determined to kick someone who is down and trying to rise. But if such is your will, so be it. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Well-Rounded Figure Preferred In New Movie Beauty Standards

Stars With Curves Led Recent Poll In Hollywood

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN THE movie powers encourage the girls to add curves, that's news. It may be the boys in camp are responsible for the upcurve. They have given their vote of enthusiastic approval to Sheridan, Turner and Lamarr. At any rate, the figure that is setting tomorrow's fashion today is normal weight with a tiny waistline and curves.

The girls who meet the screen's specifications are not only beautiful but they exude health. Plenty of vitality seems to go with such perfect weight distribution and on their light-footed way to the top of the ladder they are running circles around the actresses who keep themselves as thin as a blade of grass.

In a recent contest to discover who, currently, has the best figure in Hollywood the nominees read like a list of success story heroines. They are either "The most likely to succeed," or having arrived, they are sure to hold their own. Betty Grable came in first, but running her a close race were Ann Sheridan, Paulette Goddard and Ginger Rogers, all with a pleasing assortment of curves and plenty of energy.

Make Comparison's

But here are a few of the film's favorite figures, and you can make your own estimate:

Betty Grable—Height, 5 feet 4 inches; weight, 112 pounds; bust, 34½ inches; waist, 24 inches; hips, 36 inches.

Paulette Goddard—Height, 5 feet 4 inches; weight, 110 pounds; bust, 34 inches; waist, 24½ inches; hips, 35 inches.

Ann Sheridan—Height, 5 feet 6 inches; weight, 120 pounds; bust, 35 inches; waist, 26 inches; hips, 38 inches.

Ginger Rogers—Height, 5 feet 4 inches; weight, 108 pounds; bust, 33 inches; waist, 23 inches; hips, 33 inches.

Higher Weight Trend

Glance down the line of figures, and you'll agree that even though the film trend is toward higher weight, the stars and starlets still average less weight than women in any other career. But compare their proportions with the average and you'll find the rule is a scantier bust measurement with weight gravitating toward waist and hips.

The movie beauties have worked out a system. They have found it a good thing to keep an eye on the calories but that they get best results by a combination of caloric-cutting and building-up. So although they watch the scales, they see to it that there's plenty of nourishment in their diets, and that they get outdoor exercise for sun and air, and, when needed, specific exercises.

Specific calisthenics apt to be overlooked by the average woman—bent only on slimming waist and hips—are those which improve the contour of bust, arms and shoulders. It takes time and persistence to make an improvement in this portion of the figure, but with the exercises in the new "Bust-Normalizing Leaflet" you girls who complain of a lack of curves should be able to notice a difference in six or eight weeks. Send a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Promotion Department, Room 600 of The Washington Post, 1337 E Street Northwest.

An example of the current trend in figures is Betty Grable, a movie actress noted for her curves. Betty led in a recent poll to determine the best figure in Hollywood

DON'T FORGET brides of other years when you're planning parties this June. In lots of ways anniversay celebrations will be even more appreciated than current festivities. Here are suggestions for wedding anniversary tables that will, we hope, make you want to have a party—it's really fun, you know.

FOR THE FIRST ANNIVERSARY, symbolized by paper, set a bare dark table with lace paper doilies, flowered china, flowered glass and a centerpiece made of an old fashioned bouquet with a lace paper ruff around it.

FOR THE SECOND, the calico, set the table with a calico cloth and napkins, pewter and hobnail glass and a centerpiece of scrubbed and shining vegetables.

FOR THE THIRD, the leather, use a cloth of fine white kidskin (very new), set with gold banded china and aquamarine glass.

FOR THE FOURTH, the fruit, have lace mats with fruit patterned china and a two-tier epergne heaped with fine fruit.

FOR THE FIFTH, the wood, have a buffet table set with a green linen cloth and wooden salad bowls and trays in leaf shapes.

FOR THE SIXTH, the iron, set the table for dinner with a heavy lace cloth, majolica plates, tall amber goblets and wrought iron candelabra.

FOR THE SEVENTH, the wool, have a Sunday breakfast table set with a cloth of Scotch plaid serge, modern white plates and coffee pot and a centerpiece of white flowers.

FOR THE EIGHTH, the bronze, have a Saturday lunch with a cloth of coarse linen, a centerpiece of yellow flowers in a low bronze container and plates with bronze luster decoration.

FOR THE NINTH, the pottery, have a pink tea with pink pottery cups, a pink flowered cloth.

FOR THE TENTH, the tin, have a tamale supper with an amusing centerpiece of Mexican tin, a serape for tablecloth, plates and tumblers of aquamarine blue Mexican glass.

FOR THE TWELFTH, the linen, nothing less than white Irish linen damask will do. Set it with all white china, a white china centerpiece with white roses, crystal goblets and silver candelabra.

FOR THE FIFTEENTH, the crystal, have an outdoor dinner table with a glass top set with crystal plates and an intricate centerpiece of crystal leaves and flowers.

FOR THE TWENTIETH, the china, the occasion calls for classic ivory Wedgewood plates set on a cool pale green organdy cloth with a centerpiece of old Staffordshire figurines.

FOR THE TWENTY-FIFTH, the silver, nothing is lovlier than beautiful china, Minton or Royal Worchester perhaps, set on a bare wood table with an ornate pattern in flat silver, fine silver candelabra and a low silver urn with camelias in it.

Summer Simplicity Achieved in Poached Egg Daisy

SUMMER simplicity in hot weather meals is to be recommended. Poached Egg Daisy is such a dish. It looks elaborate but it calls for only four ingredients arranged one atop the other—a round of crisp toast, a thin or thick slice of pink ham, a poached egg and a final swirl of Hollandaise sauce. The result is a lovely picture and a taste thrill.

With this egg dish serve a salad of crisp salad greens with a colorful French dressing and a hot bread. Fresh fruit or a glazed fruit tart and a beverage would complete the meal.

For easy poaching of eggs bring salted water, 1 teaspoon to a pint of water, to a boil in a shallow pan. Have enough water to cover the eggs well. Reduce water to barely simmering, then slip eggs, broken one at a time, from a cup, tipping the cup at the surface of the water. Cover, hold at this temperature to desired doneness, 5 to 15 minutes. Do not let the water boil. Remove eggs one at a time with skimmer, or perforated spoon so that eggs will be well drained.

If you have shied away from Hollandaise, you will like the Egg Cream. This is a sauce that can be made in advance, then reheated for service. Make it this way:

Egg Cream

Beat 3 egg yolks slightly with 1 cup cream. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice and ¼ teaspoon salt. Cook over hot water until thick, stirring constantly. Yield: 1 cup.

Morning Glory Expensive

Even the modest morning glory has had its day of glory . . . there was a time in the eighteenth century when it became such a vogue that a single seed of special variety sold for $15 to $20.

Eastern Front: Behind the News

By the Associated Press

Germany and Russia—strange bedfellows of a surprise diplomatic wedding on the eve of the European War—at last laid aside the mask that had kept the world guessing for nearly two years.

Saturday they were smiling benignly over frontiers that bristled with big guns and bayonets, and publicly professed their friendship.

Yesterday, a proclamation by Adolf Hitler read over the radio and heard in New York, declared they were at war.

Every mile of the road they walked together from their mutual nonaggression pact of August 24, 1939, was lined with signposts of discord, yet months of tension passed before the actual open parting of the way.

These were the principal moves which touched off speculation repeatedly that a break was imminent, or that Joseph Stalin might have decided to risk his Red army against Hitler's blitzkrieg legions:

1. Even before the Nazis completed their lightning campaign in Poland, hastily massed Russian troops drove in from the East until they met the German drive from the West. They held the territory they had occupied, and gave the world to understand it was all agreed upon in advance. Thus the Soviet shared in the division of Poland.

2. After Hitler emerged victorious from the campaign in the West and turned eastward again Russia stepped in quickly to seize another share.

Occupied Rich Area

She occupied a rich northeastern slice of Rumania last June just before Hitler sliced off the western third of the country for Hungary and moved his forces into what was left.

Russia's move gave her a stronger grip on the Black Sea and a hold at the mouth of the Danube, and she kept large forces massed there to make sure she held her gains.

Germany, stepping nation by nation toward the Dardanelles, likewise massed heavy forces—sometimes estimated as many as 120 divisions, along her extending eastern frontier.

3. The first open expression of Soviet disapproval—and even then not voiced to Germany—came March 1 when Bulgaria signed the Axis pact and let Nazi forces through to within striking distance of either Greece or Turkey.

The Soviet government told Sofia it did not regard Bulgaria's action as conducive to the peace of southeastern Europe.

Reaffirms Turkish Pact

4. Within a few days the Kremlin reaffirmed a 15-year-old nonagression pact with Turkey, pledged to remain benevolently neutral if the Dardanelles were attacked, and hinted that Russia would supply Turkey with arms and war materials if she were attacked.

Then, too, Russia was reported to have shut off the oil supplies she had been furnishing to the Hitler war machine.

5. Once more timing her diplomatic moves against German military action, Russia signed a treaty of friendship and nonaggression with Yugoslavia April 6. That was just at the time the full threat-backed weight of German diplomacy was being brought to bear to force the Yugoslavs into the Axis partnership.

6. Even the Russian-Japanese nonaggression accord signed less than a week later while Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoko was in Moscow was viewed by some observers less as an Axis triumph than as a move by the Soviet to safeguard her back door while she juggled troops in the West.

7. Soon after that, early in May, Stalin cast off the official anonymity behind which he had guided the Soviet Union and became premier.

Some observers speculated whether there was significance in the fact that the man he replaced, Vyacheslaff Molotov, who remained foreign commissar, was the one who had negotiated Russia's pact with Hitler.

By the first week of June the tide of rumors was rising rapidly toward a crest, swollen by a flood of reports of troop movements on both sides of the German-Russian frontier.

The British, watching closely, hoped for a break that might divert Hitler's blitz legions to the east but feared the rumors were Nazi-inspired—a feint behind which might be couched Hitler's real blow at Britain.

These are the highlights of the June reports:

1. That Germany had moved large army units from Greece, Czecho-Slovakia and Bulgaria to Rumania opposite Soviet-held Bessarabia.

2. That key cities in Rumania had been advised to speed preparations for blackouts and possible bombing.

3. That Russia had massed forces along her western frontier behind the cloak of "spring maneuvers;" that troops from the Far East had been moved hurriedly westward; even—without confirmation—that she had ordered general mobilization.

The Soviet government took official cognizance of the reports through a lengthy statement which denied in the usual terms that there was trouble in the wind between Moscow and Berlin—but which admitted German troop movements near the Soviet frontiers.

It said in cautious phraseology that "it was not to be assumed" that these constituted any threat to Russia.

Grab for Materials

Observers elsewhere took the portents to indicate Hitler was using his army movements—as he had often before—to back up economic demands. These, it was believed, probably were primarily for a renewal or increase of the flow of oil from Russia, and for the right to step into the Ukraine, vast southwestern Russian breadbasket, for an economic reorganization to benefit the Reich.

The possibility still was discussed, however, that Hitler might be planning something of greater scope than an economic conquest—that he might be getting set for one powerful blow in an effort to bring his huge Communist neighbor to her knees, and put the Soviet Union into the lengthening list of Nazi dominated countries.

Reports from Finland—which appeared lined up in the new conflict on Germany's side or at least as a fully armed third party seeking to win back lost ground—indicated Stalin's Red army leaders finally had taken a stand opposing further appeasement of Hitler's demands. These said the Red army chiefs were ready to fight.

A hint that Soviet Russia was driving constantly to keep abreast of developments in the art of making war appeared at the May Day parade this year.

Red Army Mechanized

Masses of truck-borne infantry and new motorized artillery were feature attractions in the Red Square; there were fewer foot soldiers than in past years and less of the usual field artillery.

Many tanks were in the parade, and powerful long-range guns participated for the first time.

Dive bombers — presumably given much recent attention by the Soviets in view of the German success with them—roared and plunged in the skies over the square.

The Soviet air force is one of the most closely guarded secrets in the world.

Foreign estimates placed the number of warplanes at about 9,000 in 1939. Since then, reports from Moscow have indicated the Soviet was putting lots of energy into expanding and improving the air force.

As a result of the Spanish civil war in which Russian-made planes finally were all but driven from the field by German and Italian machines, the impression has grown that Russian planes were mostly out of date.

But guarded technical comment in Soviet journals has indicated new types of bombers and fighters were in production.

Air Progress Shown

In August 1939, fast new "secret" bombers and three other types of planes streaked by spectators at an Aviation Day show.

The Red air force has pioneered in a number of military practices which were adopted by the Germans. They have experimented with glider trains—used by the Germans to transport troops in the invasion of Crete—they have engaged in mass training of parachutists, and during the occupation of Rumania in June, 1940, they carried light tanks by plane and dropped them well forward of their infantry lines.

High flying also has been extensively experimented with by Soviet airmen to escape anti-aircraft fire.

The mass dumping of incendiary bombs in "Molotov breadbaskets" was another Soviet innovation in air warfare introduced in the Finnish invasion and copied by the Germans.

The Soviet fleet's size is not known, but the authoritative British manual, Jane's Fighting Ships, says it has been officially stated that the new Red warships completed in 1939 totaled 112, and that by 1940 the figure was expected to be 168.

Naval strength is spread between the Baltic, Black, Caspian and White Seas, and in the Far East opposite Japan. . . . .

Three Battleships Building

There are at least three old battleships, built in 1911, with three more new ones reported being built. The Tretii International were ordered abroad, mostly in the United States and Germany.

Russia is estimated to have six cruisers, three of them comparatively new, and one under construction; 1 aircraft carrier and 2 building; 59 destroyers and 9 building; 170 submarines and 30 building.

Japanese sources have reported at least 70 Soviet submarines are based in the Far East, opposite Japan at Vladivostok.

Last November the government newspaper Izvestia claimed Russia had the largest submarine fleet in the world, but gave no figure.

Some Soviet naval units recently staged war games in the inland Caspian Sea surrounded on all sides by Soviet territory save for the Iran (Persian) shoreline.

Russia's main Baltic seabase is at Leningrad, but through recent territorial acquisition she now has ports in Latvia and Estonia.

Any German sea thrust at Russia undoubtedly will be via the Black Sea from German-occupied Rumanian bases. For some time, Germans have been reported shipping submarines by rail to the Black Sea port of Constanta, where they are assembled.

national, a 35,000-ton vessel mounting nine 16-inch guns, was laid down at Leningrad in July, 1939. It may be finished by now. Two more battleships, perhaps of 40,000 tons, have been reported under construction.

Guns, armor and boilers for the Tretti International were ordered abroad, mostly in the United States and Germany.

Bill Cunningham's Column:

. . . Mythical Air Raid Turns Blood to Ice Water

By Bill Cunningham

I was strictly attending to my own business, Judge, and just driving along toward Knoxville, Tenn., when we took a slow lope over a couple of hills and invaded the bucolic privacy of a fair-to-middlin' little center which seemed to boast the name of Shelbyville. Just about the time we hauled abreast the filling station section, with a rheumy eye out for a pump that hawked our kind of gas, and connected with or adjacent to a jook joint that carried coffee as a sideline, the loudest siren I ever heard in all my born days busted loose.

The Duchess almost jumped out of her black-and-white shoes. I whoaed her to the curb in haste and got out to hold her head, figuring the fire engines would be along any minute. But as the thing kept screaming like 10,000 banshees, the town's lights began to black out in every direction. The whole place was stygian as the tomb in practically nothing flat. I could hear screen doors slamming and people calling to each other when the siren paused to catch breath before letting go again. Everybody seemed to be hurrying into the streets.

Here Come the M. P.'s

It was only a little place and I couldn't see any fire, but before I could figure out what in thunder was coming off and in which direction, three soldiers wearing M. P. arm bands came charging at me like running guards from three different directions yelling, "Get the lights off that car. Turn those lights out. Quick."

I had just obliged in great haste when out of the southeast, riding high across the hills came a drumming crescendo, faint, at first, but sustained and ever increasing until swiftly it was tearing the very heavens apart. All at once, the black night above was literally alive with roaring planes, a lower layer not so very high over the dark and silent town, but these ceilinged by a faster, fancier and noisier armada that seemed to be dipping and darting and weaving this way and that, to judge from the lights they were flashing, apparently as signals.

Just then, from both sides of the street, from beneath the shrubbery in the little park down the sidewalk, and apparently from the top of what seemed to be an office building, the deafening whap-whappity-whap of antiaircraft broke loose in an insane sort of chatter, the staccato barks bouncing off one hillside to strike another farther along in that black Tennessee landscape, and bounce again, like something elastic, until it sounded as if the voices of the gods were muttering angrily all up and down those craggy valleys, to the infinity of the universe.

It was all over in one mighty smash. Planes can't tread air like swimmers tread water. The mighty siren wailed again. The lights came up, the citizens and the soldiers stood around talking it over.

Town a Total Loss

But, technically, Shelbyville was obliterated and all of us were dead. I didn't hear the official decision, but an antiaircraft outfit, supposed to spot those "invader planes" and "shoot them down" before they could get to the town, was either asleep at the switch or got buck ague. They haven't fired even yet. And the "friendly planes" supposed to intercept the raiders and turn them away, didn't show up until after they had made their unimpeded dive at the town, theoretically dumping every bomb that they carried.

I don't know how they scored that pot shooting from the village precincts, but there were only a few guns and there were an awful lot of planes, or so it sounded. If I were an umpire, my vote would be that the place was bombed flat, with everything and everybody in it a total loss.

Of course, it was to perfect the ground end of the performance that this show was pulled off. It was a regular training chapter in the life of the Second American Army, now trying to wrest the State of Tennessee from a mythical invader. The bombers and their convoy made their raid from the air fields of Georgia.

I'm just as glad I left the district. There's serious business afoot. That air raid was only fooling, but it turned this "victim's" blood into something that felt very like ice water.

Turnstile Blitz Fails

New York, June 22 (AP).—A slight case of congestion developed today when five Bronx children tried to jam through a subway turnstile on one nickel. They began to push when the last in dropped the coin into the slot. One girl caught her head between two bars. The crowd, drawn by her screams, brought patrolmen with crowbars. A police sergeant delivered a lecture.

Suspicious Circumstances

The fact that Mason Gray, 45, of 79 H Street Northwest, was perched atop the garage at 209 Varnum Street fully clothed, was enough to have neighbors call for police to investigate yesterday afternoon. A cruiser car raced to the scene, to find Gray taking a sun bath, despite being fully clothed.

Group to Draft Tests For U. S. Lawyers

The Committee on Government Lawyers will meet June 30 to decide on the type of noncompetitive tests to be given Uncle Sam's 5,000 attorneys whose jobs will be brought under a merit system. The committee also will make plans for a competitive test for young lawyers that will be given within a few months. It's planned to have the register of eligibles ready by January 1. Noncompetitive tests, it's reported, will be much more rigorous than regular Civil Service exams. Three of the candidates being considered for executive secretary to the committee are Herbert Wechsler of Columbia University, Fowler Harper, former general counsel of Federal Security Agency, and E. Edward Rhetts, assistant solicitor of the Labor Department.

Washington has the cheapest cabs of any large city in the country and Congress plans to make the most of it. Congress has ordered Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt to make a study of the cost of using cabs for official business as against the present use of official cars. The plan is to abolish all official cars except those used by Cabinet members and to make underlings use cabs at Government expense. The McNutt survey indicates the use of cabs would save Uncle Sam money.

Civil Service is having a tough time attracting card punchers to take its open exam. Only 901 have applied for the alphabetic card punch test and 1,457 for the under card punch exam. . . . For that matter the number that applied for the junior clerk test was a keen disappointment. In 1930 the same test drew more than 200,000 applicants but only 13,000 applied for the recent test, 9,464 for the filing option and 3,535 for the statistical option. . . . Abner Ferguson who took a cut of $2,000 when he was promoted from general counsel to administrator of FHA, will be paid $12,000 after July 1. So will Comptroller General Lindsey Warren. Riders on appropriation bills provided the boosts.

Census Asks Change

The Senate knocked out the plan to save money by requiring Treasury's Accounts and Deposits and Disbursements to consolidate its 52 field offices into 24 regional offices. From an employe viewpoint it's fine because the jobs of more than 500 employes will be saved by the Senate's action. . . . Census has asked Congress to waive the manufacturers census this year and for authority to take the census every five instead of every other year. The bureau is busy gathering statistics for defense agencies.

In the District are 28,148 employes whose jobs were classified as field on April, 1941. Roughly 175,000 other employes here are classified as departmental. More than half of the field employes—15,598—are employed in the Navy Yard and, of course, can't be touched, but many of the other 12,500 are faced with having their regional offices shifted to the field. It's known that special study is being given the field offices here by the decentralization committee. It's said that most of these offices could do their work as well outside the District as they do here. Moreover, field offices here couldn't be moved very far from the District. Half a dozen agencies are understood to have recommended that their field offices here be moved to make room for defense workers.

It's a safe bet that Secretary Ickes will permit War and Navy employes to use park land to park their cars despite the howl that's being made. The controversy is due to be settled at the White House. . . . UFWA has succeeded in getting Morris Tepping furloughed instead of fired from the Federal Security Agency pending a hearing before the commission's board of appeals. The commission ordered Tepping fired though it didn't accuse him of being a Communist. . . . Negative cutters are paid only $1,440 at the Army War College but in other departments they are started at $1,800 and the War cutters aren't permitted to transfer to the other agencies where they would be paid more for doing the same work.

Church Youths Discuss Problems of Generation In Annual Forum Sessions at Md. College

By Robert Tate Allen
Post Church Editor

Westminster, Md., June 22.—Gathered on the green slopes of Western Maryland College, young persons of various denominations and many walks of life today discussed questions that are bothering the Christian youth of this generation.

They wanted to know, among other things:

How far should the church go in providing recreational and social facilities?

How can the church counterbalance the tension of modern living?

How can I determine what type of movies to see?

How can I influence the lives of others?

The youths from Maryland, Virginia and the District mingled at the seventeenth annual young people's conference and the eighteenth annual officers' and teachers' conference, both sponsored by the District of Columbia Sunday School Association and the Y. M. C. A. religious work department.

William E. Anderson, jr., of Petworth Baptist Church, Washington, and an employe of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was named to head the Young People's Conference for 1942. William S. Jones, member of Metropolitan Baptist Church and Navy Department engineer, will lead the officers and teachers for another year.

Howard Salzman, of Fifteenth Street Christian Church, and a member of the Rev. Harry V. Porter's forum group, felt that churches shouldn't "go overboard" in the matter of recreation. They should keep a well-balanced program, of benefit socially, mentally, spiritually and physically, he said.

Mr. Porter, youthful pastor of Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Church, Washington, asked that church youths regard various church activities as interwoven, and not separated—keeping all recreational and social programs "Christ-centered."

On the question of movies, the Rev. John Ballbach advised his forum members that they would have to make individual choices on what-to-see and what-not-to-see, but expressed the hope that the Protestant churches might someday have a committee to determine certain moral film standards for its members.

Another forum was conducted by the Rev. Theodore ("Ted") Miller, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Baltimore, who later in the morning delivered the meditation at the conference communion service in Baker Chapel.

Assisting in that service were the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, sr., pastor of Fifteenth Street Christian Church, Washington; the Rev. Philip C. Jones, associate pastor, Madison Avenue (New York) Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Mr. Porter; Dr. Charles E. Resser, Sunday School Association president, and the Rev. Mr. Ballbach. Lynn Elmore, member of Calvary Baptist Church, Washington, and soloist at Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, sang a solo with Mrs. Page McK. Etchison as organ accomanist.

Among other high spots of Sunday's program were a chapel service at 7 a. m.; a Sunday school problem forum later in the morning and the closing sessions in the afternoon, at which the speaker was Dr. T. Guthrie Speers, pastor of Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church, Baltimore.

Other youth group officers elected were Margaret Osborne, secretary; John A. Patterson, jr., counselor, and Chester H. Jones, assistant, all of Calvary Baptist Church, and the following denominational vice presidents:

Clyde Freed, Metropolitan Baptist; Howard Salzman, Fifteenth Street Christian; Ruth Brownell, Mount Vernon Place Methodist; Richard Probst, Ingram Memorial Congregational; Esther Dunkley, Kenilworth Presbyterian, and Hilda Luttrell and Harry Dillow, representing Baltimore.

New officials of the officers' and teachers' group include Mrs. Edward H. Cox, Calvary Baptist, vice president, and Page McK. Etchison, Y. M. C. A. religious work secretary, executive secretary.

Couple Receives Anniversary Gifts at Church Conference

Mrs. Page McK. Etchison burst into tears, and her husband was too surprised to speak yesterday at the Westminster Conference, as they were presented gifts on their silver wedding anniversary.

They've been attending Bible and Sunday School conferences at Westminster, Hood College and other places for 18 years—he as president of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association and secretary of the officers and teachers' conference, and she in the role of pianist-organist. Page is Y. M. C. A. religious work secretary.

During the breakfast hour in the college dining hall, youth conference counsellor, John A. Patterson, jr., announced that Bruce Etchison, the couple's son and a recent American University graduate, had sent them a silver serving tray for the occasion. Then another counsellor—Chester Jones, stepped up with a set of silver candlesticks.

The couple were married on June 22, 1916, when she was a music teacher and he had just begun his work as Y. M. C. A. religious work secretary here.

Dr. Charles E. Resser, president of the D. C. Sunday School Association and Smithsonian paleontologist, told his breakfast companions yesterday that he would leave this morning for the oldest fossil beds in the Western Hemisphere, in the Canadian Rockies. There he will spend three months investigating the Cambrian rocks. It will mark his tenth geological trip in the Jasper Park section since 1914.

Three generations were represented among the delegates. They were John A. Patterson, sr.; John A., jr., both conference registrars, and Barbara, 4-year-old daughter of the latter and Mrs. Patterson, jr. John A., jr., is counsellor of the young people's conference. All go to Calvary Baptist Church, where John, sr., is a deacon and has been a member since '97.

The Rev. Harry Porter, pastor of Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Church in Washington, received sad news during yesterday's sessions. John W. Brown, long-time elder of his congregation, died suddenly Saturday night.

Bugler Walter Horn had a range of "sour" notes in his bugle as he began to blow "taps" on Saturday night. A practical joker had squeezed lemon juice in the mouthpiece.

Police Quiz In Slaying Demanded

Hebert Asks All Working on Strieff Case Be Called To Capitol Hill

Representative F. Edward Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, announced last night he would ask the House District Committee to call up for questioning today "every policeman who has worked on the Strieff case."

The announcement followed admission by police that they were without a clew to the strangulation and rape of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, pretty 23-year-old War Department clerk, and that the supersquad of detectives assigned to the case was doubling back on its week-long investigation.

Representative Hebert said he saw no reason why there should not be "immediate Congressional action" in investigating police who are attemmpting to solve the rape-slaying.

Includes Other Cases Also

"We also should call up to Capitol Hill every policeman who's worked on all of Washington's unsolved murders," he declared. There have been four unsolved murders here within the past three months.

After a week of intensive investigation, Capt. Ira Keck, acting chief of detectives, admitted that police are without one tangible clew that would throw light on the case. It was a week ago today that Miss Strieff's body was found dumped in a garage in the rear of 1717 Q Street Northwest. She had left her apartment, 2110 Nineteenth Street Northwest, during a Sunday cloudburst to purchase a stick of butter at a nearby delicatessen. Peter Duncan, proprietor of a delicatessen, 1816 Florida Avenue Northwest, said a girl resembling Miss Strieff bought 12 cents worth of butter from him on the day she disappeared. Here the trail ends.

Police Efforts Redoubled

In desperation, detectives are redoubling their efforts in going back over the trail, hoping that some person may recall having seen the girl or that some clew may have turned up. The neighborhood within a wide radius is being searched by police. All proprietors of grocery shops, apartment house attendants and residents living in the neighborhood are being questioned again.

Keck said he was reasonably positive that the murder was committed by one person. There was no accomplice, he said. He still clings to the theory that Miss Strieff was either pulled into a hallway or stepped into an automobile or taxi. Keck said the girl wore no jewelry that could be traced and that she had less than $1 in her coin purse.

Police were attempting to find links between Miss Strieff's death and a 24-year-old colored man who was arrested last night following the rape of a 27-year-old colored woman in the alley at the rear of the 400 block of N'Street Northwest.

The man confessed to several other criminal attacks and to a murder in Harlem last April, it was said.

A routine check was planned in all Capital laundries today to determine the name of the man who dropped a package containing a blood-spattered bed sheet yesterday in the rear of 1613 P Street Northwest.

John Norman, colored, gardener at 1625 P Street Northwest, told police he saw a white man, about 35 years old, of medium weight and blond hair, drop the package early yesterday and run off.

Alexandria Children Sell Junk To 'Bail' Pet Out of Dog Pound

Rex, the handsome black and tan shepherd who has become the "community pet" of children residing in the vicinity of the 1700 block DeWitt Avenue, Alexandria, is back in circulation again.

Seemingly proud of his new collar and his shiny brass license tag, he is free to frolic at will with his young friends, who less than a week ago were forced to call on all their resources to prevent Rex's untimely demise in the city pound's lethal gas chamber.

Where Rex originated, no one seems to know, but he apparently liked the treatment accorded him by residents of the neighborhood when he arrived about a year ago, and he's remained there ever since. Sleeping one night at one youngster's home, the next in a neighbor's basement, he has been adopted by the neighborhood, and with more than 20 boys and girls around to lavish their affections on him, he has been extremely happy in his new surroundings.

Last week, however, Rex's world crumpled. A city dog catcher, touring the neighborhood, observed he was wearing no license tag, picked him up and took him to the pound. Unless someone was willing to put up $3, the children were told, Rex would be executed within five days.

After a hasty conference the neighborhood became a beehive of activity. Old papers and junk were solicited from nearby homes; frequent trips were made to second hand dealers and by 4 o'clock that afternoon the young financiers checked their resources and found they were 10 cents over the required sum, leaving sufficient balance to buy Rex a collar.

Rex's salvation was temporarily delayed when the delegation arrived at the pound and learned the attendant had left for the day. The following morning, however, the impounding and inoculation fees were paid, a license was purchased and Rex was back on the neighborhood scene.

The youngsters were mighty proud of their accomplishment, but proudest of all was 9-year-old Bobby Ryan. The license tag had to be issued in someone's name, the agent said, and Bobby was unanimously elected as the "owner" because he seemed to be a particular favorite of Rex. Technically, Rex has acquired an owner, but he still makes a regular round of the neighborhood for his meals and a place to sleep.

Consumers To Protest Milk Rise

Representatives Of Citizens' Groups Slated to Testify At Hearings

Opposition to an increase in the producers' price of milk by one cent a quart will be expressed today at a hearing in the Departmental auditorium by representatives of consumers.

There is expected to be put into the record, also, before the hearings are over, protests from those who are seeking 1 cent milk for the city's schools, and extension of the 3-cent milk program to more of the city's needy.

Hearings will be opened by the Surplus Marketing Administration at 9:30 a. m., on an application for the price increase filed by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association.

Mrs. Sarah Newman, president of the Milk Consumers Committee, said yesterday that she will call attention, among other things, to the current Government drive for a well-nourished Nation of individuals as part of national defense preparations.

Her organization has invited representatives of several hundred civic organizations to attend the hearing, which is expected to continue for several days.

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, long-time critic of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association which is asking the cent-a-quart increase, possibly will attend the hearings.

Mrs. Newman said yesterday that she would answer the producers' contention that the costs of feed and labor have risen with the assertion that "it doesn't hold good."

And denying this contention, Mrs. Newman's organization and supporters will recommend that local milk regulations be superseded by new regulations administered nationally. The change, she believed, should come because of the Government's nutrition policy, which is national in scope and because "the local regulations are hindering the importation of perfectly good milk."

RKO-Radio Breaks Out With 1941-42 Teasers

Handsome Plans Are Afoot for New Season; "Buster" Crabbe Busts Office Wide Open Hot Weather Hunches and Amusement Trivia

THE FIRST of the Hollywood producing companies to snap out of its annual convention hurly-burly with an announcement of product for the 1941-42 screen season is RKO-Radio. . . . Between 40 and 45 feature pictures and 190 short subjects are on the schedule. . . . Stars will include such as Ginger Rogers, Cary Grant, Charles Laughton, Bette Davis, Gary Cooper, Anna Neagle and Orson Welles, with a raft of Walt Disney bristol-board characters thrown in. . . . Barring the Disney figments, these will be directed by Alfred Hitchcock, Lewis Milestone, William Wyler, Allan Dwan, Tay Garnett, Richard Wallace, Robert Stevenson and the likes of them. . . . The new season, starting September 1, will be highlighted by Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of "The Little Foxes," starring Bette Davis, borrowed from the Warners; Cary Grant and Joan Fontaine, in "Before the Fact;" three of more Disney feature-length productions, including "Bambi," and vehicles for the stars already named and others. . . . The season also will mark the return of Gloria Swanson to the screen and add Fibber McGee and Molly to the list of notable radio entertainers before the cameras. . . . The studio also will continue to bear down on the development of young new personalities—a crafty move in which it has taken the lead.

GINGER ROGERS

And that reminds me. Martin Quigley's Motion Picture Herald—which can think up more things—submits a list of 60 newcomers, second-string and featured players from which we are gently urged to select the 10 who seem to promise the most for development to topmost rank for the marquee names to come. That will take a little mulling over. After all, if the producers and directors can't tell, how can we? However, we'll give it a whirl. But later.

Porpoises in Waltz Time

These Hopkins Twins, headliners with Larry "Buster" Crabbe in the "Water Follies of 1941," opening tonight in the Uline Ice Arena, must be something. . . . Born in Hollywood, Marian and Virginia were the stars of the San Francisco World's Fair Aquacade, where they introduced water wizardry nobody has been able to copy successfully to date. . . . With breast, back and crawl strokes, they execute porpoise, pinwheel and tandem swimming that even includes a water waltz in perfect rhythm with the music, much as Sonja Henie flashes over the ice in three-four time. . . . They began at 10 and were winning championships at 11. . . . And all we can do in the water is drown!

If it isn't too late to say so, "The Philadelphia Follies," which opened yesterday with Marty Bohn as star, will continue through tomorrow on the stage of the Atlas Theater, out Northeast way, in conjunction with a double-feature screen bill. . . . And this sudden blast of high-bracket temperatures, straight from the gates of Gehenna, has pushed the passenger lists on the river excursion boats practically up to capacity. . . . The dancers have been doing all right for themselves right along. . . . Now the top-deckers are having their innings—or is it outings? . . . Try as they would, they couldn't get the doors closed on "Fantasia" Saturday night at the National. . . . "Seventh and positively final week" now on tap—unless they decide again on Saturday night to go an eighth.

Palpitations and Pitty-Pats

The gals in the building haven't got over it yet. . . . I mean the call "Buster" Crabbe tried to pay this desk Saturday a little too early on our theoretical "day off." . . . "Buster" is a high, wide and handsome lad, as you will find out when you visit the "Water Follies," and sight of him completely disrupted The Post's feminine forces. . . . Naturally, our luck being what it is, it would have to be during our absentee hours that Larry was trying to buy somebody a lunch. . . . By the time the phone got around to ringing, we were here. . . . It was the voice of Soldier Edward de S. Melcher, former Washington dramatic editor and critic, that neither rippled nor yet boomed over the wire. . . . Eddie was between trains, en route from New York to Fort Jackson, in South Carolina. . . . He read his estimate of Army life out of the camp manual: "Swell. Terrific. I love it." . . . I could hear Carter Barron laughing.

The 1941 Summer Festival Series at the Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, will get under way on Wednesday night of this week with "Smilin' Thru," acted out by the St. Paul Players. Other programs will be presented on July 1, 9, 16, 23 and 30 and August 6, weather permitting. . . . The Cross Roads Theater will present "Young April" as its second bill of the season, beginning tomorrow night.

How-Do-You-Mean-"Vacation" Note

So this is the "off season" is it?

They Now Know the Meaning of 'Lower Away'

OVER THE SIDE IN GOOD ORDER

A bird's-eye shot from the new film, "Men and Ships," sponsored by the Maritime Commission and being previewed by an invited audience in the Archives Building this morning. Beginning Wednesday, it will be shown on the screen at the Little Theater, as an added attraction with the "Chaplin Film Festival," the whole comprising a unique bill

Fight Films Steal Show At Trans-Lux

Even though the news section of the current bill at the Trans-Lux Theater is far above the average because of startling events, the Louis-Conn fight pictures overshadow everything on the screen. Here is a complete recording of this historic fistic encounter, and the twelfth round alone is worth a trip to the newsreel house. There are many slow-motion sequences demonstrating the punching ability of Conn and the final knockout by Louis.

The foreign news is topped with the dramatic speech of Winston Churchill as he proclaims a fight to the finish against Hitler. The dramatic story of the sinking of the Nazi battleship Bismarck is recorded, while in Egypt James Roosevelt inspects U. S. planes now ready for attack against the Axis. On the road to Damascus, the cameraman shoots the capture of an Iraq fort, and in Addis Ababa Emperor Haile Selassie makes a triumphant return to his capital. Survivors of the Robin Moor land in Brazil and an envoy reports its sinking at the State Department in Washington.

Plenty Here at Home

The domestic scene presents the newly appointed Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone and Justices Jackson and Byrnes; the S. S. America, luxury liner, now a troop transport in readiness at Norfolk, Va.; John Roosevelt on duty at Boston; Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard, at the White House; the new National Airport and Uncle Sam's largest airplane factory just completed outside Cincinnati, Ohio. In Philadelphia, super bombs for the Army are being rushed, and at Fort Benning, Ga., tin-hat styles are demonstrated.

In the world of sport the shots include the Bethlehem Air Circus; Jalopy Handicap at Albany, N. Y.; the Harvard-Yale rowing classic, on the Thames, and a remarkable animal picture of wrestling between a chimp and a shepherd dog The travelog is timely taking you to Syria, while a Popular Science short presents the Luther Burbank, of Oklahoma, and rubber hydrochloride in the making.

LEONARD LYONS

New York, June 22.

The current issue of Life features David E. Scherman's photos of the sinking of the Zamzam, as well as the first picture of a Nazi raider. This is the way in which Scherman was able to obtain these exclusive photos: The Zamzam's crew and passengers were transferred from the raider to the prison ship Dresden—which brought them to Biarritz, after its name had been altered to Ogna. The captain of the Ogna listened to the prisoners' request to make photographs—and said that too many photographers would interfere with the work of his crew. He therefore designated Scherman as the only one who would be permitted to take pictures—on condition that he share the photos with other prisoners.

GROUCHO MARX

Scherman, however, couldn't find his camera. The only one available was owned by one of the Zamzam's missionaries—a Midwesterner whose avocation was photography. Scherman used that camera—but to make sure that Life magazine would get the pictures exclusively, Scherman wrote a contract and the missionary agreed. And so there, in the middle of the ocean—aboard a Nazi prison ship from which they were not quite sure that they would emerge alive—the contract was signed, giving unto Scherman's magazine employer the exclusive rights to all photographs made with that borrowed camera.

Charles J. V. Murphy, of Fortune magazine, was another of the passengers aboard the Zamzam. He was the one elected by the passengers to represent all of them in their conferences with the Nazi officials aboard the ship . . . One of the officers, whose name was Ulrich Mohr, was the liaison man for the captain, in charge of morale, propaganda, etc. He asked the Americans, in precise English: "Are there any newspapermen among you?" Murphy informed that he was a magazine writer . . . "When you get back to the States," said Mohr, "please give this postcard to a friend of mine in New York." He mentioned the name of a lady whose father-in-law is the possessor of one of the mightiest names in the banking world . . . "This is most unusual," Murphy told him. "That lady came down to see me off—when the Zamzam left" . . . And so, on the postcard addressed to that lady, Ulrich Mohr wrote, from midocean: "It's amazing how one meets mutual friends."

When the Zamzam's American contingent arrived in Lisbon they went to the American legation. One of the diplomats who received them realized that they were anxious for news—to learn what had been happening during the long days in which they were imprisoned. And so he permitted them to read the confidential news wire dispatched from the State Department in Washington. . . . They read of the new political moves—the progress of the British campaign in Libya, the report of the fall of Crete. . . . The dispatch concluded with the world-shaking news they all had been awaiting anxiously—"Dodgers Win, 9—0."

Groucho Marx visited the naval base at San Diego to perform at an ASCAP festival for the sailors stationed there . . . Some of the admirals accompanied Groucho on a walk through the grounds . . . "Well, what do you think of the place?" they asked Groucho later . . . "Fine, except for one thing," he replied. "The arsenal is too far from the golf course."

Tommy Dorsey is dedicating his next "Camp Upbeat" radio program to the boys at Camp Upton. Yesterday he telephoned the camp and asked for Private Zinn Arthur—who was a bandleader before he was drafted. The operator was unable to find Private Arthur. . . . Dorsey then asked for Captain King—but after two hours the operator informed that she was unable to locate Private Arthur or Capt. King. . . . Dorsey became angry at what he believed to be inefficiency. He shouted to the operator:? "Can't find 'em, eh? Maybe it's easier for you to find Gen. U. S. Grant"—and then he hung up. . . . The operator called back later—and informed that Gen. U. S. Grant, grandson of the late President—could be reached in Washington.

When Billy Rose addressed the members of the Harvard Club at last week's luncheon he told them of his production of "Jumbo," which Jock Whitney financed. "I made up my mind that 'Jumbo' was either going to make me or break Jock Whitney," Rose confessed. "And it almost did both" . . . He then related of the startling problems which confront a showman each day. "For example," Rose cited. "For 'Jumbo' I had to get 12 horses—six of them black and six white. I never knew it could be so difficult." . . . "But that shouldn't be," one of the guests protested. "Such horses are not uncommon." . . . "I know," replied Billy, "but in addition, all of them had to have eyes like Irene Bordoni's."

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Connie in "Support"

Hollywood, June 22 (INS).—The very chic Constance Bennett didn't need much persuading when energetic Andy Lawlor, of the Sam Jaffee office, asked her if she would accept a sophisticated, high comedy role in Garbo's picture. Connie is a wise girl and she knows that the important thing is a good part, no matter if the lead is played by another woman star. She has a chance to wear some gorgeous, smart clothes and no one dresses in better taste or more up-to-the-minute than La Bennett.

CONSTANCE BENNETT

Actresses today are so much smarter. Men, too, for they appreciate the value of a good role. M-G-M never minds teaming their big names and they have done it successfully with "Boom Town" and now with "When Ladies Meet." While I am on the subject of Constance Bennett, it's interesting that her movie "Bought," which she made for Warner Brothers with Ben Lyon in 1931, will be remade with Bette Davis.

A pleasant surprise for Bessie Love's fans, who remember her from silent days and early talking successes, is the news that she has been active in English pictures. "The Prime Minister," bought by Jack Warner, starring John Gielgud and Diana Wynyard, carries Bessie's name as production assistant. Further word from London is that Bessie is now helping produce "Atlantic Ferry," in which she will also play a little cockney girl. This, too, will be released in America by Warners.

Ronald Colman, who has given so abundantly of his time and finances to his native England, paid $5,000 for the rights to "White Cliffs of Dover," Alice Duer Miller's poem, which he turned over to the British government to make a picture.. Lynn Fontanne speaks the lines of the poem, and background shots will be made in England to go with it—a different kind of movie. Another interesting Colman gesture is the record he made of Gene Fowler's "Jarvis Bay" for the Victor Company with music by Meredith Willson.. Proceeds go to the British government.

HEDDA HOPPER

Garbo Will Appear in a Remake

Hollywood, Calif., June 22. It's almost two years since we've had the pleasure of seeing Garbo's "Ninotchka." In all that time they've been looking for a story for her. All kinds of suggestions were made, one story was finished, and now guess what she's doing! An old German play called "Fulda."

GRETA GARBO

It was first made into picture form by Connie Talmadge, and called "Sister From Paris." Then Darryl F. Zanuck did a remake of it and now this original idea has been passed on to Garbo, who plays a dual role—a glamorous sister who tells the dull sister how to win back a husband, so he falls in love with his own wife after glamorization.

If Joe Pasternak makes the same success with Kathryn Grayson that he did with Deanna Durbin—and I see no reason why he shouldn't—he'll be worth whatever the company pays him . . . I hope Warners hasn't oversold Philip Dorn's performance in "Underground," because he's a fine actor and can win on his own, without such a ballyhoo, which may prejudice people against him.

Both David Selznick and Walter Wanger are flirting with the idea of making a war picture with a Chinese background, mostly from reliable information, given them by Henry Luce, who's just returned.

We think we're pretty good party throwers, but it takes the Latins to really demonstrate hospitality. When the wife of fat, jolly Chris-Pin Martin, Cesar Romero's Mexican "good man Friday," had her fifty-second birthday, a Mexican marimba band woke them at 3 a. m., serenading. Papa and Mama Martin and nine grandchildren climbed out of bed and rushed to the kitchen to prepare refreshments. In no time, piping hot enchiladas were being passed around, while toasts were drunk in red wine and beer.

Party turned into a fiesta which lasted two days, during which the Martins were serenaded by six Mexican orchestras, played host to a constant stream of well wishers, including Cesar, Bob Burns, Mary Beth Hughes and Harry Sherman, who produces "Hopalong Cassidys." All refreshments were turned out by the children and neighbors, while Mama Martin sat enthroned, forbidden to do anything but eat and play hostess.

Among the extras on the "Mexican Spitfire" set the other day, Leon Errol came across Lottie Harvey, one of the prettiest Ann Pennington girls of 27 years ago.

Harpo Marx's fantasy sequence in "The Big Store" is something to shout about—so is Tony Martin's song, "Tenement Symphony." But from there on it's a Midsummer Night's Dream of Madness . . . Jane Darwell is now growing sweet potatoes in her garden, which is a yam good idea, I think.

Claire Trevor says she's never met a "successful woman" who didn't always drag in the old gag, "But I should have had a husband and ten children—I'm a born mother at heart!"

Now that the nine-day diet has hit the town like a pest of locusts, Nat Pendleton says he's reducing under a doctor's care. For breakfast he gets one sliced grapenut; for lunch, a caraway seed and a large glass of water. "And for dinner," says Nat, "the M. D. puts a toothpick in my mouth and walks me up and down in front of a delicatessen window!"

Do you remember Director Sam Taylor who made the best Harold Lloyd pictures, also Mary Pickford's? He retired five years ago. Now he's back as assistant to Johnny Considine. . . . Peter Godfrey, who's called the Orson Welles of England, is directing "Unexpected Uncle," with Charles Coburn.

Ex-College Men Muggs in Films

The illiterate gangster has become a thing of the past in Hollywood. Six side-of-the-mouth-talking lugs who play principal parts in Paramount's "Buy Me That Town" confess that every one of them went to college. The sextet includes Lloyd Nolan, who went to Stanford; Sheldon Leonard, Syracuse; Albert Dekker, Bowdoin; Warren Hymer, Harvard; Edward Brophy, Virginia, and Horace MacMahon, Fordham.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Lou Nova finally gets a chance to be in the same ring with Joe Louis with gloves on. A half dozen times within the past year, Nova has been in the same ring with Louis but only to take a bow and stand aside before the champion went to work on such as Red Burman, Abe Simon, Tony Musto, Buddy Baer and Billy Conn. On the night of September 17, Nova will be in there on his own.

POVICH

Promoter Mike Jacobs chose to bide his time with a return Louis-Conn fight that promised a million-dollar gate and appointed Nova as the party of the second part for Louis' next title defense. That would be a bit baffling, except for the fact that Uncle Mike is no green pea at the matchmaking business and does not, habitually, give himself any the worst of it.

In any event, Conn, the man who put up the greatest fight against Louis in the champion's eighteenth defense of his title, appears definitely side-tracked until next summer. The outdoor season will permit only one more big fight and Nova has the September date with Louis. Jacobs' schedule calls for June and September fights, and if Nova lifts Louis' title, Conn's return to the ring against Louis may be further delayed because Louis' contract undoubtedly will call for a return bout with Nova, thus setting back another Conn fight.

Actually, the arrangements for the September affair between Louis and Nova isn't definite. Nova has signed for the fight, and Louis will sign for the fight because he must fight at the direction of Jacobs. But Uncle Mike's contracts with fighters are peculiar. Our attorney would call it unilateral. The contract is binding on the fighter, but it isn't binding on Jacobs. He can pull out at any time, and if he feels next week that a Conn-Louis fight in September would be a better idea, Conn and Louis it will be.

Nova seems to deserve the next Louis fight. Conn has something of a claim on it in view of his sensational battle with the champion, but the fact remains that Nova has been on the sidelines while a half dozen guys have had a shot at Louis' title. Conn had his and, despite all that may be said for him, he was knocked out. Nova is the only important challenger who hasn't had his chance at Louis.

Nova can't be accused of coming out of hiding and yelping for a Louis match after Conn exposed Louis' vulnerability. Long before Conn was regarded as a heavyweight challenger, Nova was shouting for a Louis fight.

It's a match that lends itself to terrific ballyhoo. The chief item which the drum-beaters will exploit, of course, is the new possibility that here's a bout in which the title could change hands without too much of an upset. It would be no great task to build Nova up into an attractive threat to the championship, and Jacobs hints that the fight might gross as much as $700,000 are not too far-fetched.

The ballyhoo for Nova could excel even the lush build-up for Conn. Nova is a strange duck, what with his Yogi-ism, his imperturbability and his claim that he has rendered himself impervious to physical pain. The fight camp correspondents and mimeograph machine slaves can sink their teeth into that angle and their literature will probably hit a new high.

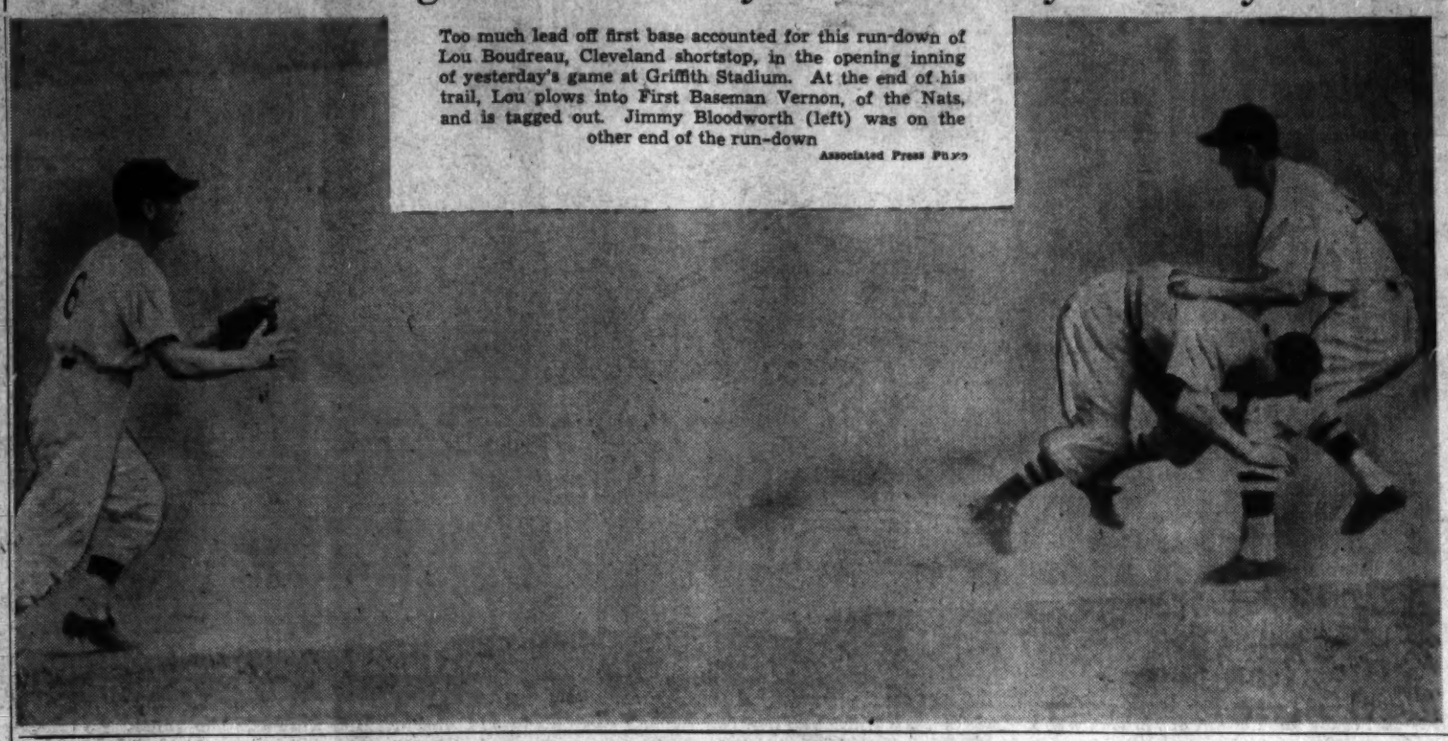
Since Conn, a 175-pounder, wrecked the belief in Louis' invincibility and since Louis himself gave evidence that he is no longer the hungry fighter of his younger days, any sort of a heavyweight would draw well with the champion. But Nova must be rated as the man who would attract more of a gate with Louis than anybody except the amazing Conn.

The story of Nova is sort of sensational in itself. Less than 18 months ago he was in the fistic ashcan after being led from the ring a beaten and bloody knockout victim of Tony Galento in the goriest fight Philadelphia ever saw. Nova was seemingly definitely through as a fistic figure, and he was virtually counted out when he came down with an infection that put him in a California hospital for months while his weight fell to a mere 170 pounds.

Nova was out of the ring for more than a year and has had only four fights since his return, but he came back as a far better man than the one Gene Tunney once described as "simply a horrible fighter." He gave young Pat Comiskey a boxing lesson and he knocked out Max Baer, and he took on the reputation of a tough guy, indeed.

There isn't much doubt that if Nova had had Louis in the same wobbly condition that Conn maneuvered the champion into in the late rounds, Nova would have knocked the champion out. He hits that much harder than Conn. But Nova, unlike Conn, is no will o' the wisp and offers a better target for Louis. He'll have to be impervious to pain, indeed, if he finds that he has to slug it out with Louis.

Boudreau's Plunge Toward Safety Is Blocked by a Sturdy Nat



Too much lead off first base accounted for this run-down of Lou Boudreau, Cleveland shortstop, in the opening inning of yesterday's game at Griffith Stadium. At the end of his trail, Lou plows into First Baseman Vernon, of the Nats, and is tagged out. Jimmy Bloodworth (left) was on the other end of the run-down

Burnett Wins State Amateur Golf Crown

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., June 22.—Volney Burnett, the fireman from Indian Spring, won the Maryland Amateur golf championship for the second time in five campaigns by defeating Bob Albertus, of Bonnie View, 5 and 4, in a one-sided final match yesterday at the Suburban Club. Burnett won both the title and the medal in 1937 at Manor Club.

Burnett did not have to apply pressure—Albertus did that himself. For the first five holes it was a good match, and the gallery licked its chops anticipating another such prolonged struggle as the two on Saturday afternoon that went to the last hole for decision.

But Albertus began to drop behind. Burnett rammed down a 15-foot putt for a birdie win on the sixth. Albertus lost the seventh with a 6, where his drive struck a tree, his second was trapped and his third was still off the carpet. He lost the eighth by being trapped from the tee and failing to get on with his second shot. When they halved the ninth in pars, Burnett was 3 up and unbeatable. It was only a question of how far the match would go.

Missed Again

Bob missed the tenth green, too, and when Burnett lay 4 feet from the pin with his second, and Albertus needed four strokes to get inside him for a stymie, he conceded the birdie.

Each recovered well to have the eleventh in par, but Burnett sank another putt, this time from 7 feet for a winning birdie on the twelfth. Albertus had short putts to win both the thirteenth and fourteenth, but missed them both and the match ended.

The cards:

Out par	434	444	435	—35
Burnett	444	543	435	—36
Albertus	435	544	645	—40
In par	444	454	334	—35—70
Burnett	343	45
Albertus	545	45

Burnett required only 23 putts on the 14 holes, and his game was sound in all departments. Albertus first found trouble when his tee shots took to wandering, and it was a struggle from there until the end.

Ralph Beach, host club pro, had

DiMaggio and Rolfe Hit One Each as N. Y. Breaks Game Streak

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—The Yankees showed baseball in general and the Detroit Tigers in particular today that it doesn't pay to cut in on their monopoly of home-hammering honors.

A year ago, the Tigers clouted four-baggers in 17 straight games to post a new major league record for that particular stunt. So today, with the Tigers as victims, whether they wanted to be or not, the Yanks bounced a couple of their special bombs in the Bronx for their eighteenth game in a row to wipe out the Tigers' mark.

The fact that the Yanks won the game 5-to-4, with a two-run rally in the ninth, was the least important part of the proceedings. For, not only did this newest edition of murderers' row erase the homer-whacking mark, but Joe DiMaggio collected two hits during the party to run his consecutive game hitting streak to 35 straight tilts, thereby coming within six of George Sisler's modern mark.

One of Joe's jolts was his fifteenth homer of the year. The other Yankee circuit clout was produced by Red Rolfe during the ninth-inning splurge. This pair of pokes made a total of 30 the Yanks hit in the course of their recod-wrecking run. The Tigers' 1940 string produced 26 round-trippers.

A crowd of 27,072 customers sat in on the proceedings today and saw the Yanks win out on a walk with the bases loaded in the ninth.

Jim Demaret, Hogan Victors In Inverness

By International News Service

Toledo, Ohio, June 22.—Fnishing in a driving rain which failed to stop a gallery of more than 10,000 persons, Ben Hogan and Jimmy Demaret today won the $2,000 first money in the seventh annual Inverness Invitation Round Robin golf tournament.

The two Texans annexed a one-up victory over Ralph Guldahl and Ernie Harrison, who won eighth place and $300. The second place purse, $1,200, went to Byron Nelson, P. G. A. champion and host pro, and Jimmy Thompson.

Lloyd Mangrum and Harold McSpaden third, $900 Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta, fourth, $700; Horton Smith and Lawson Little, fifth, $600; Sam Byrd and Johnny Bulla, sixth, $500, and Dick Metz and Clayton Heafner, seventh, $400.

New Champions

The new champions lost but one match during the tourney's 126 holes of match play. Picard and Revolta beat them 1-up this morning, but at that time the Texans were playing cautiously to protect a long lead built up in four days of sensational golf.

His share of the winnings increased Hogan's lead in the race for the Vardon trophy. The lithe 137-pound Hogan has won $10,067 in tournaments this year, as against $6,716 for Craig Wood in second place, $6,116 for Bulla, $6,061 for Sam Snead, $5,875 for Nelson and $4,855 for Heafner.

Mangrum and McSpaden won $200 for the greatest number of birdies, a total of 46 and they shared with Nelson and Thomson the $200 for the lowest medal score, each team having turned in a 62. Results of the final day's matches follow:

Picard-Revolta Win

Morning matches: Picard-Revolta (66), plus one over Demaret-Hogan (66); Mangrum-McSpaden (62), plus over Smith-Little (67); Byrd-Bulla (67), one up over Heafner-Metz (68); Thomson-Nelson (62), two up over Guldahl-Harrison (65).

Afternoon matches: Demaret-Hogan (66), one up over Guldahl-Harrison (67); Byrd-Bulla (64), plus three over Smith-Little (67); Thomson-Nelson (63), one up over Heafner-Metz (64), and Picard-Revolta (65), all even with Mangrum-McSpaden (65).

Kennedy, Sundra Give Ten Hits; Bob Credited With 4th Straight Over Griffs

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

The Nats' three-game winning streak shattered itself against the shutout pitching of Bob Feller yesterday. Twenty-three thousand fans, Griffith Stadium's largest crowd since the opening game, watched with dismay as Feller rendered the Nats helpless.

Cleveland won the ball game by a 6-0 score. The Indians rapped Vernon Kennedy for most of their ten hits and all of their six runs before he retired at the end of five innings. Steve Sundra moved into the game at that point and took up the thankless task of facing Feller with a six-run lead.

It was no great surprise that Feller beat the Nats. He was doing it yesterday for the fourth time in four attempts this season, which is rather near par for the job. It seems that the Washington Athletes have managed to stir up only one earned run against the reformed Iowa farm boy in those four games.

Feller wasn't blowing 'em down to win his fifteenth game in 18 starts. He was simply getting them out with great regularity. He struck out six, and otherwise they were beating his fast ball into the dirt or popping it into the air for the most part. Until the ninth, he had a five-hit game to his credit.

Heat More Potent

Feller was seemingly bothered less by the Nats than by the torrid heat. His uniform was a damp, disheveled thing from the early innings as he bent to his task, and between virtually every pitch he was mopping his brow with his shirt sleeve.

Anyway, the Nats should be finding it cooler today. They're back in the cellar. The Browns moved ou by splitting a doubleheader with the Red Sox up in Boston yesterday.

Manager Bucky Harris unveiled Kennedy as a surprise pitcher against Feller after announcing that Sundra would start the game. Kennedy was no rollicking success. He gave up a run in the first inning, and the Indians scored in four of the five innings he was on the mound.

Kennedy walked the first man to face him—Boudreau—but to the delight of the 23,000 he picked Boudreau off base a moment later. How-

Chicago, June 22 (AP).—Pauline Betz, Winter Park, Fla., today won the National Clay Court women's singles tennis championship at the Suburban River Forest Club.

Dodgers Take Pair As Cards Lose Two

Hubbell, Wittig Beat Leaders, 4-3 and 3-2, In 90-Degree Weather

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 22.—Veteran Left-hander Carl Hubbell and Rookie Right-hander John Wittig licked the St. Louis Cardinals today and the double New York victory, 4 to 3 and 3 to 2, left the Redbirds with only a game margin on first place.

While the two teams were battling until dusk in 90-degree temperature, second place Brooklyn was nosing out the 1940 world champions, Cincinnati, in two games.

Hubbell, 38 years old today, was not spectacular as he worked steadily for eight innings, gave way to a pinch hitter in the ninth and received credit for his sixth win of the year. But Wittig had a no-hitter for five innings and except for the sixth, and the ninth, had the league leaders in complete subjection.

Four of the five hits he allowed and all the St. Louis runs came in the sixth. In the ninth after Estel Crabtree fanned, Wittig walked Johnny Mize. Mize went to second on Wittig's balk and Slugger Enos Slaughter was purposely passed. Manager Bill Terry then called on Walter Brown for the second time during the day and the St. Louis threat vanished into thin air.

Bill Jurges' double, Wittig's single, Dick Bartell's two-base blow and Johnny Rucker's triple accounted for the Giant runs in the third inning. Rucker Also drove in the winning run in the first frame.

The Giants went into the ninth inning of that game trailing 1 to 3. Four safeties off Harry Gumbert scored two runs to tie the score and send the former Giant to the

Flock Defeats Reds In 16-Inning Opener, 2-1; Win Second, 3-2

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 22.—The Brooklyn Dodgers handed big Paul Derringer, of the Cincinnati Reds, one of the bitterest defeats of his long major league career today—a 16-inning, 2-1 setback in the opener of a double-header—and then grabbed the nightcap, 3-2.

An all-time record attendance of 35,752 fans sweltered in 93-degree heat for 3 hours and 36 minutes of the opening struggle. In ten innings Lonnie Frey was the only runner to reach third and only two Dodgers got to second.

Kirby Higbee held the Redlegs to three first innmg singles in the nightcap. The hits cost two runs.

Billy Herman doubled and scored on Phil Lavagetto's single in the fourth and doubled again in the fifth to score Harold Reese, who singled. Herman then came in on Pete Reiser's single and Whitey Moore replaced Johnny Vande Meer as Redleg pitcher.

Derringer and Whitlow Wyatt dueled through ten scoreless innings in the opener, then Wyatt clubbed his first home run of the year. Ill, Wyatt gave way to Hugh Casey, against whom the Redlegs tied the score in the eleventh on

Bosox Split With Browns; Laabs Is Star

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 22.—The St. Louis Browns blasted 29 hits in two games today, but the best they could get was an even break with the Boston Red Sox.

Landing on Jack Kramer for six runs in the first inning, the sox withstood the 16-hit St. Louis attack to triumph, 7 to 5, while in the nightcap the Browns made 13 safe blows in smearing the Boston Club 12 to 3.

Chet Laabs had a field day for the visitors, driving in nine runs and poling a homer in each contest—making it three-round trippers in two days.

The oldish rookie, Mike Ryba, got credit for the Red Sox victory in the opener when he relieved Charley Wagner in the fifth—and it was fitting for between the two games Ryba was presented a trophy as the most valuable player in the International League last season.

Frankie Pytlak's triple with the bases loaded was the big blow in the Boston victory.

Deyoe Is Skeet Victor After 4 Shoot-Offs

By the Associated Press

Lordship, Conn., June 22.—George Deyoe, of Washington, D. C., won the all-bore individual championship in the thirteenth annual Great Eastern Skeet Shoot today after shooting four extra rounds or 200 straight.

Mrs. M. L. Smythe, of Aurora, Ohio, smashed 99 out of 100 targets to retain the women's individual title she won a year ago with an identical score.

In the all-bore event, five gunners turned in perfect scores to deadlock for honors, but finally it was Deyoe against Edward Matsuki, Waban, Mass., broker, with Deyoe turning in a perfect performance and Matsuki missing one bird on the fourth extra round.

J. S. Hawkins, of Washington, was eliminated in the first shoot-off when he broke only 24 birds, while the four others went straight.

In the second extra round J. W. Alcock, of Ridgewood, N. J., carded a 34, while 16-year-old F. Luther Brown, of San Antonio, Tex., came up with a 23, leaving Matsuki against Deyoe.

H. Lutcher Brown, father of F. Lutcher Brown, took the high-overall gun title after a six-way shoot-off with Dick Shaughnessy, of Dedham, Mass., 149 to 148.

The National Capitols of Washington, D. C., won the five-man title after a shoot off with the Minute Men of Lexington, Mass., both tied at 492 in the regular competition.

A record of 294 gunners, 16 more than last year, competed in the championships.

Langhorne Race Driver Is Killed When Tire Blows

Siemienski, who raced under the name of Metz Eimins, was pinned in the wreckage. The right rear tire blew out as it rounded the first turn on the 1-mile oval in the qualifier for the 100-mile feature race.

Driving a blazing, record-breaking race, Duke Nalon, of Chicago, won the 100-mile feature in 64 minutes, 39.88 seconds, clipping five minutes 96 seconds off the mark he set last year. He averaged better than 92 miles an hour.

Four miles behind Nalon, who never stopped, was Joie Chitwood, Oklahoma Indian.

750 Fans See Touted Rival Bow

Barney Wins Easily, 7-5, 6-1, 6-3; Pairs With Lynch to Take Doubles Victory

By Jack Munhall

When the tennis chips are down, Barney Welsh still can put together the aces and wind up with the winning hand. The lanky Rockville Rambler proved this once again yesterday as he routed Don Leavens, the newcomer who was supposed to end his local reign, winning his fourth City of Washington title.

Before an estimated 750 Edgemoor Club fans, one of the largest tennis crowds ever to see matches here, Welsh gave forth with a scintillating brand of strokes to overwhelm Leavens, 7—5, 6—1, 6—3, with an ease attested by the scores. Thus he added the cup to his trophies gained in 1936, 1937 and 1939.

With half an hour rest, Welsh returned to the broiling courts with Hugh Lynch and took the doubles crown in a brilliantly played match with Leavens and Davie Johnsen. The score was 4—6, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4. It was the second straight time Welsh has shared the doubles title, having won it last year with Lynch.

The decisiveness of Welsh's triumph over Leavens, who twice defeated him in recent exhibitions here, awed an astounded gallery, many of them lost sizable wagers on Leavens, the former national boys champion. Some said Leavens was off form and pointed to his numerous errors.

Pressure Players

There's a chance that they were correct in their appraisal of the form of the former Southern California ace. But once again Barney demonstrated that beating him in an exhibition and whipping him in a match that really counts are vastly different propositions.

In the entire match Welsh was behind only three times—all in the hard-fought opening set when Leavens started off by cracking Barney's service in the first game and then held advantages of 4—3 and 5—3. Barney began to click in the ninth game and how completely the tide changed henceforth is seen by the fact that Welsh then reeled off seven straight games, lost the fourth game of the second set, and then captured seven more in a row to make it 14 of 15 games.

Deciding factors of the doubles match were Lynch's volleys and half volleys and Welsh's drives. Young Davie Johnsen gave Leavens plenty of support in this one, but the pair of them couldn't cope with Lynch's short game and Welch's effective baseline smashes.

When Lynch and Johnsen broke Johnsen's service in the tenth game of the last set to win the four-hour match they were settling an argument. For as Johnsen prepared to serve Lynch and Welsh had suggested that they quit at the end of the game, for it was getting too dark to continue. Johnsen and Leavens wanted to continue, but their opponents fixed that by cracking Davie's service, which was no easy task in the twilight, for young Johnsen employs a whistling flat serve which is at all times difficult to follow, even in good light.

Yesterday's Results

Singles (final)—Barney Welsh (1) defeated Don Leavens (2), 7—5, 6—1, 6—3.
Doubles (final)—Barney Welsh and Hugh Lynch (1) defeated Don Leavens and Davie Johnsen (2), 4—6, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4.

Thomas Aids Pepco Victory

Ken Thomas muffled Elite Laundry with two hits last night at Washington Softball Stadium, fanning 13 and leading his Pepco mates to a 13-4 triumph in a National Night League game. Holst with a homer and double and Beach, with a circuit smash and a single, led Pepco's potent 14-hit attack.

Greenbelt continued its undefeated status in the second game, also a National Night League tilt, by whipping Evening Star, 10-4. Ben Goldfadden, former George Washington U. star, led the attack with three for three in the 11-hit Greenbelt attack.

Tonight at 6 p. m., Fat Boy will risk its undefeated Sherwood record against May Hardware. At 8 p. m., the Fatsos will take on Yellow Cab in the Capital City League and at 9:15 p. m., the D. C. Firemen, conquerors of I. B. M. and Senate Beer, will face the U. S. Aggies in an exhibition game.

Braves Sweep Chicub Bill, 6-5 and 3-2

By International News Service

Chicago, June 22.—The Boston Braves today swept both games of a doubleheader from the Chicago Cubs, winning the first game, 6 to 5, and taking the nightcap, 3 to 2, before a crowd of 25,136.

It was the first double win for the Braves this season. In the second game, they scored all their runs, only one of them earned, in the fourth inning on three singles, Babe Dahlgren's error, and a pair of walks allowed by Jake Mooty and Vance Page.

The Bostonians put across a two-run rally in the ninth to win the first game. Pinchhitter Buddy Hassett, who singled, scored on Paul Waner's lusty double to tie the score at 4-all, and Waner crossed the plate on Sibby Sista's double with the winning run.

Phils Split With Pirates, End Streak

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 22.—The Philadelphia Phillies ended a seven-game losing streak today by spraying five Pittsburgh Pirate pitchers with 17 hits to win the second game of a double-header, 7-4, after dropping the first game, 4-1.

Max Butcher was the loser in the parade of Pirate hurlers in the nightcap as the Phils greeted him with two runs in the first inning and never were headed. Nick Etten and Danny Litwhiler each had four hits for the Phils.

The Pirates scored their runs in clusters of two in the fifth and eighth innings driving Tom Hughes to the showers with the final outburst.

Cy Blanton pitched no-hit ball for five innings of the first game, but an error by Merrill May paved the way for three Pirate runs in the sixth. Rip Sewell gave seven hits but the Phils went scoreless until the ninth inning of the opener.

Spencer-Farrell Beat Sarazen and Doerer, 3 and 2

Beale's Ace Features Argyle Team Victory; Gipe, Harris Tie Again in Federal Golf

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Cliff Spencer, who's been on the winning side in a half-dozen exhibition matches this year, was the individual star again yesterday at East Potomac as he and Johnny Farrell, the '28 Open Champion, defeated Gene Sarazen, a charter member of golf's hall of fame, and Tommy Doerer, 3 and 2.

Spencer and Farrell each played the B and D courses in two under par 70's but the host professional's score included two penalty shots for balls out of bounds. Sarazen and Doerer matched par figures with 72s. All scores included conceded putts.

Sarazen and Farrell treated the crowd of 1,800 to some fine golf over the Hains Point course. The big-name pros came here especially for the match, arriving in the morning, while Farrell left by afternoon train and Sarazen by night plane.

Can't Stand Prosperity

The match was all square at the turn, but on the back nine Farrell found his short game touch and came back in 33 strokes and Spencer came in on two holes for a best-ball 31. Sarazen's birdie on the third and Doerer's birdie on the fifth gave the losers a 2-up lead, but they couldn't stand prosperity.

Spencer was the long-hitting member of the foursome, while Farrell, playing the course for the first time, was the short-shot artist. Sarazen played steady golf with a dozen fours on his card while Doerer holed two green-length putts to help his par score.

The fashion-plate contest was a draw as Farrell, nattiest of the big-time golfers, and Spencer, the local dapper dan, dressed for coolness and not show.

ANNAPOLIS ROADS

Host Pro Levi Yoder buckled down to a 15-foot putt on the last green with his knock-kneed stance and rammed it in the cup to give him and Roger Peacock a 1-up victory over Mel Shorey and Charles Malone in a match yesterday at Annapolis Roads.

Shorey and Malone, of Indian Spring, won the first nine, 1 up, but Yoder came back in 32 and Peacock, also of Indian Spring, in 35, to take the back nine and the 18-hole match.

Yoder scored 42-32 for the round and Peacock 39-35. Malone and Shorey, who played better partner golf than individual, had approximate 77 and 80, respectively.

ARGYLE

Luke Beale's hole-in-one, a timely shot which gave him and his partner, Ray Amsden, three points, featured Argyle's 19½ to 13½ upset victory over Beaver Dam yesterday over the winner's course.

Playing the 170-yard seventeenth hole, Beale used a 5 iron and knocked the ball in the cup for his first ace. For good measure, Amsden holed a putt for deuce as the Argyle teammates won over Rochelle and Smith, of the visitors.

Ray Lawrenson has been appointed golf committee chairman at Argyle, succeeding Bill Taylor, who resigned for business reasons.

Holaberg and Dooley (A) scored ½ point to 2½ for Miller and Baggett (BD); Mothershead and Myers (A) scored 3 points to 0 for Heimer and Mansfield (BD); Gibson and Williams (A) scored ½ point to 2½ for Woodside and Wagner (BD); Manning and Murray (A) scored 2 points to 1 for Millbourne and Woodside (BD); Amsden and Beale (A) scored 3 points to 0 for Rochelle and Smith (BD); Barnes and Allirup (A) scored 2 points to 1 for Baumgartner and Johnson (BD); Terrell and Bickerton (A) scored 0 point to 3 for Abbey and Wilson (BD); Brousseau and Chamblin (A) scored 3 points to 0 for Rogers and Mossor (BD); Jett and Bill (A) scored 2½ points to ½ for Bailey and Winerlter (BD); Lake and Klingerstmith (A) scored 0 point to 3 for Griffin and Forarty (BD); Johnston and Stearns (A) scored 3 points to 0 for Frownfelter and Dyer (BD).

BANNOCKBURN

Jimmy Gipe, the defending champion, and Jack Harris, a local unattached professional, remained tied for the Federal Golf Association Championship after an 18-hole playoff at Bannockburn.

They tied with 141 totals in the 36-hole play last week and yesterday had 73s, Harris playing the nines in 35-38 and Gipe in 37-36.

18-Year-Old Stranahan Wins Trans-Miss

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 22.—Stocky Frank Stranahan, 18-year-old Toledo, Ohio, star who slipped through the first two rounds virtually unnoticed, was on fire today as he defeated John Barnum of Chicago, 6 and 5, in the final round of the Trans-Mississippi golf tournament.

He sizzled around the difficult Sunset Hills course in near record figures to become the youngest winner in the 41-year history of the event.

Stranahan was out in 64, eight under par, to take a 7 up lead on the morning round and played the last 13 holes under a blazing sun this afternoon in even par. The course record is 62, which has stood for 13 years.

The youth had Barnum, long hitting former amateur champion of Mexico, eight down and 11 to go but the 6 feet 3 inch sporting goods salesman held on doggedly for six more holes, winning two and splitting four.

The match ended on the short thirteenth with both players knocking in easy par threes.

Barnum was even par for the 31 holes.

The Ohio youngster, holder of the Arizona State amateur title, started off with a par and two birdies to win the first three holes and was never pressed.

Hogan, Golf's Big Money Man, Challenges All

By the Associated Press

Toledo, Ohio, June 22.—Ben Hogan, the year's leading money winner, hoisted his prize dough for 1941 today to $10,607 by pairing with Jimmy Demaret to split the $2,000 first award in the Inverness Four-Ball Matches.

The little Texan is still a long way from the record of $19,600 set in 1938 by Sam Snead, but he's within $500 of his leading total of 1940 with more than $100,000 still to be split up on the golfing circuit.

As Hogan and Demaret pocketed the prize fund today, they hurled a challenge to any and all golfers in the land.

"For $1,000 a side, Jimmy and I are willing to meet any two golfers in the world," Hogan declared. "We're willing to play any kind of golf match, any place, any time and for almost any amount."

Demaret, flushed with victory, nodded agreement.

'Keepsie Crews Kept Idle by 86-Degree Heat

By the Associated Press

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 22.—Sultry summer steamed the Hudson River so well today that in the crew camps the youngsters who, 72 hours from now, will be rowing for dear life in the 4-mile varsity ract ust lolled around on porches in 86-degree heat.

Not until late afternoon did a few venture out for workouts. California and Syracuse didn't bother getting on the river at all.

On the porch of one boat house was a prominent eastern coach who didn't mind giving his opinions but preferred their source be not identified. The advance dope has given his eight a chance to break the West Coast monopoly which only Navy has been able to crack in eight years, but he didn't think so.

"Our last time trial wasn't so good," he said.

The first division, he maintained, would include only Washington, favorite and defending champion, and California.

"And I don't think Washington should be as strong a choice as everyone is labelling them," he continued. "They've got power to burn. Yet from what I've seen, California is going to give them a very tough struggle. That California boat has more polish, more smoothness. So far as I can judge, they're a far better match for Washington now than they could have been in April, when Washington beat them three and a half lengths."

Parker Wins Clay Courts Title 3d Time

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 22.—Frank Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., won the National Clay Courts Tennis Singles Championship today by defeating Bobby Riggs, of Clinton, S. C., 6—3, 7—5, 6—8, 4—6, 6—3.

John Kramer, Los Angeles, and Fred Schroeder, Glendale, Calif., won the doubles championship, defeating Joe Hunt, Annapolis, Md., and Charles Olewine, of Santa Monica, Calif., 6—4, 7—5, 8—1.

The stroke analysis of the Parker-Riggs match showed 66 outs for Riggs to 89 for Parker; 52 nets for Riggs to 27 for Parker; 40 placements for Riggs to 54 for his opponent. Riggs failed to score an ace, the victor getting one. Riggs had five double faults to Parker's one.

The victory made Parker National Clay Courts singles champion for a third time. Riggs had won the title three times.

Vol Burnett Wins State Golf Crown

one ruling to make as referee. On the fourth hole Albertus hit a hook that came to rest on a dead line with the stake marking out of bounds just inside the high-wire screen, which guards Reisterstown Road from straying shots. The ball was judged to be partially in bounds and therefore playable.

Albertus neglected to save his red-hot golf of the morning semi-finals for the title encounter. He was just four shots under par figures for 15 holes, as he turned back Medalist Ralph Bogart, 5 and 4. Bogart was one over par for the route.

The District champion lost the first hole when he kicked his ball while watching Albertus shoot and he went one down to stay. Albertus fired six birdies at Bogart, dropping putts of 30 feet on the tenth hole and 40 feet on the thirteenth.

Meanwhile Burnett was two or three shots over par figures but that was plenty good enough to bury Buck Armacost by a 4 and 3 margin. The new champion lost the first two holes but after halving the third he got on his stick and won seven of the next 12 holes and the match.

Buster Mrstik, of Bannockburn, won the fifth flight, defeating Dr. E. G. Schmidt, C. C. of Maryland, 3 and 2 in the final round.

Burnett was extended in only one match en route to the title, defeating Edgar Lucas, 5 and 4, Lawrence Wisner, 1 up, Armacost, 4 and 3, and Albertus, 5 and 4.

Collegiate Golf Tourney Opens Today

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, June 22 (AP).—A Western 24-man college team nosed out an Eastern squad today to open the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship golf tournament on the Ohio State University course.

The team scores were 6½ to 5½. The Westerners lost a year ago.

Ohio State's Billy Gilbert was today's medalist with a two under par 70, followed by these 71 shooters: Peter Page of Princeton, Earl Stewart of Louisiana, Ben Smith of Michigan, Cary Middleoff of Mississippi and Dan Yates of Georgia Tech.

Stewart, 150-pound junior, was proclaimed collegiate driving champion after he slammed a tee shot 284 yards in a contest. Herb Rose of Minnesota set the best average for three shots, however —260 yards.

Tomorrow and Tuesday will be devoted to qualifying rouds of 18 holes each day to cut the field to 64 for match play starting Wednesday. The finals will be Saturday.

F. Dickson Brooke of the University of Virginia is individual defending champion. Stanford and Louisiana State hold the team title jointly. One of the best liked players is Bobby Brownell, Duke University grad from Washington, who holds the Southern Intercollegiate crown.

West Lanham Oval Anticipates New Midget Records

A mass assault of all existing Eastern speed records will be made by from 20 to 25 midget automobiles tomorrow night when they compete for $2,000 in prize money on the steeply-banked track of the new West Lanham (Md.) Speedway at 8:30 o'clock.

Cars of every make and description will be present for the twice postponed races which will be presented at West Lanham Saturday night in the event of another postponement tomorrow.

The recognized Eastern speed standard thus far is a 65-mile-an-hour pace hit upon the Cedarhurst (Long Island) Speedway. Inasmuch as the West Lanham raceway is banked to a height of 17 feet on the turns and 4 feet on the straightaways, however, it is believed that the little cars may range between 70 and 75 miles per hour in the new setup.

One of the competitors scheduled to bid for a new speed mark will be Ernie Gesell, considered by many as the hottest racing star in the country today. Gesell climaxed an amazing string of victories last week when he emerged a triple winner in major competition.

Whirlaway to Meet Western Colts After Eastern Triumphs

3-Year-Old Champ Also to Try for American Derby; Worth $40,000

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, June 22.—This is a little note of warning to the 3-year-olds in the West—head for the storm cellars, boys; Whirlaway's on the way.

Having mopped up all the worthwhile cash in the East, topping it off with $8,075 in the fifty-third running of the Dwyer at Aqueduct yesterday, Warren Wright's whacky whizz-bang will be shipped to Chicago this week for the next stops in his target practice at Seabiscuit's all-time money-winning record of $437,730.

He'll take a crac kat the classic at Arlington Park and the American Derby at Washington, each worth about $40,000. And, from the way he has walked through the best of the lot in the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness, the Belmont Stakes and the Dwyer, it looks like the 3-year-old who might beat him either never was born or is now being equipped with a special 12-cylinder airplane motor to turn the trick.

Chicago Money

The two Chicago affairs, if he wins them—and who wants to put up a bob or two that he doesn't?—would boost the Kentucky cannonball's earnings to some $325,000. Yesterday's pay envelope, although not as large as usual, raised his two-year racing bank roll to $244,186. After the Windy City wars, Whirlaway will be sent back East for the Saratoga social and galloping season in August, with the approximately $17,000 Travers as his No. 1 appointment and the gold cup as a possible added attraction. He'll also take a whirl at Belmont's fall prizes before wrapping up his 3-year-old crown.

If there had been any lingering doubt about his seat at the head of the class—and don't forget there still are some folk willing to bet even against death and taxes—Blenheim's Batty Baby just about cleared it up yesterday. This was no record-smashing job like he did in the Derby, although he did lower the stake mark to 2:03-2-5 for the mile-and-a-quarter.

Easy Victory

In the Dwyer, he just went out and beat 'em. That's all there was to it. He just started last, went round the others, and finished first. Lou Tufano's sore-footed Market Wise made one run at him, and all Eddie Arcaro did was give him some more rein and whisper "Let's go, baby," in his ear. Whirly went right away from there. At the finish, he was a length to the good over the Tufano's $1,000 bargain buy. He did drift out some in the stretch, but Arcaro explained this was because he had changed his hold on the colt when he saw Market Wise coming, and the sudden shift caused Whirlaway to go wide. However, the claim of foul which followed was filed away with such things as last winter's underwear and your best left-handed monkey wrench.

End of Strike In West Coast Shipyards Seen

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, June 22.—Early settlement of the Bay area machinists strike, without use of force, was held a possibility today by United States naval authorities.

The strike, now in its seventh week, has seriously hampered work on $500,000,000 worth of defense orders. It involves both the C. I. O. and A. F. L.

Admiral J. W. Greenslade, commandant of the Twelfth Naval District, said new conferences would be held tomorrow which he hoped would lead to "a definite plan as to what course and action is to be followed."

The admiral said he was opposed to the use of force "unless it becomes necessary" and that it was his sincere hope such measures would not be necessary.

A. F. L. Group Awaits Bid

"Tomorrow it is planned to discuss the entire matter with all parties concerned, and to bring all issues to a head, so that each side may know precisely where the other side stands," he said.

E. F. Dillon, business agent for the A. F. L. machinists, said his lodge had not yet received an invitation to tomorrow's conference.

A Navy spokesman said that while some union representatives may not be asked to the meeting, all concerned would be asked at least to send a statement of their views.

Admiral Greenslade's statement came in the midst of persistent rumors that the Navy was ready to act to bring at least one of the major shipbuilding plants here—Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co.—back to full production. Bethlehem holds approximately $300,000,000 in orders for 19 naval craft.

A. F. of L. and C. I. O. machinists struck May 10 in 11 plants to enforce their demands for $1.15 an hour and double time for overtime, and for a closed shop in Bethlehem. They rejected a coastwide master agreement for $1.12 an hour and time and a half for overtime. Their former contract called for $1 and double time for overtime. Bethlehem rejected the closed shop clause of the master agreement.

Opposes Use of Force

Discussing reports the Navy might take over Bethlehem as the Army took over the North American Aviation Co. at Inglewood, Calif., June 9, Admiral Greenslade's statement said:

"We are opposed to the use of force unless it becomes absolutely necessary and have every confidence in the municipal authorities and police . . . to maintain order, and to protect the individuals who desire to return to work, and their families, should such protection become necessary. However, it is our sincere hope that measures in this direction will not be necessary.

"The Navy has every confidence in the fundamental good faith of the men now striking and it is our hope that they will return to work of their own free will. . . .

"We have every hope that a complete return to work may be effected in the early part of the week."

The Navy already has taken a hand in the strike. When other craftsmen decided to disregard the machinists' picket lines and return to work in the struck plants, the Navy for several days provided transportation. Recently, however, the men have been going through the lines unescorted and unmolested.

Ford Pact Ratified

Detroit, June 22 (AP).—The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers rank and file today ratified the union's history-making contract with the Ford Motor Co.

The agreement, most far-reaching ever written in the automotive industry, was accepted by an overwhelming majority of 12,000 workers at a mass meeting at the State Fairgrounds after three hours of speech-making, discussion, cheering and booing.

The Ford company, long regarded as the last major stronghold of nonunionism, reached the agreement with U. A. W. last Friday in Washington. It provided, among other things, for a union shop and dues check-off.

Arlington Baptists' Dream Of New Church Comes True

PARTICIPATE IN EXERCISES—Shown at the dedication of the Mount Vernon Baptist Church yesterday in Arlington are (from left) E. Burton Corning, architect; Dr. F. W. Boatwright, president of the University of Richmond, who spoke; the Rev. W. R. Pierce, pastor, and the Rev. Perry Mitchell, former pastor

A thirteen-year old dream became a reality yesterday afternoon when the parishioners of Mount Vernon Baptist Church in South Arlington, Va., dedicated their new $30,000 building.

Dr. F. W. Boatwright, president of the University of Richmond and a former instructor of the Rev. Willard Pierce, pastor of the church, brought greetings from the General Baptist Association of Virginia.

Dr. Boatwright told the large congregation that the "independent spirit" of Christian education will prevail over totalitaranism. "The minds of the people who are suffering under dictatorship are dedicated to democracy," he said.

It was in March, 1928, that 15 Baptist residents of South Arlington met in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Williams, 628 Twenty-sixth Street, to organize the church. Duly chartered in September of that year with the Rev. E. A. Puryear as pastor, the church opened its own building in 1930. Mr. Puryear is now pastor of Arlington Baptist Church.

From Richmond in 1935 came its present pastor, Mr. Pierce, and during his pastorate the church has paid off the mortgage on its old building and has grown in membership.

The choir was under the direction of D. E. Wentzel, accompanied by Mrs. Wenzel. Present at the services were the Rev. M. Puryear, the Rev. Terry Mitchell, pastor of Westover Baptist Church, and the Rev. Thomas Betschler, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church.

Missionary Night will be held Tuesday evening in the new building, with Dr. Charles E. Maddrey, secretary of the foreign missionary board, and representatives of foreign countries as speakers.

Wheeler Warns Against Aiding Nazis' Enemies

By International News Service

Highland Park, Ill., June 22.—The Russo-German war "ought to give the American people a picture of what is really happening in Europe," Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, declared in an address here tonight.

"It ought to convince us that we should have no part in Europe's war," he said. "If we were in the war today we would have to be fighting against Finland, and we would have to take to our bosom Joe Stalin and communism."

Senator Wheeler called Wendell Willkie, Navy Secretary Knox, and War Secretary Stimson "war makers," and said the country is fortunate to have a "Gen. Wood and a Lindbergh, who have kept us out of war up to the present time." Gen. Robert Wood is chairman of the America First Committee.

"These men—the Willkies, the Stimsons and the Knoxes—want the President to carry on an undeclared war now in violation of the Constitution of the United States," Wheeler said. "To do so would flout and destroy democracy. It would help Stalin and communism.

"It would mean that President Roosevelt had broken his campaign pledges. It would mean that naziism or communism had conquered the United States without firing a shot."

Wheeler demanded that President Roosevelt repudiate statements that he (the President) desires war.

"If the President does want unity—if he does want faith in government—he must repudiate the statements of his intimates and his Cabinet members who are continually saying publicly and privately that Roosevelt is doing everything he can to involve us in war," Wheeler said.

The Senator added that the President should also repudiate statements that the Administration "is only waiting for a (war) incident or for the American people to catch up with him on his war thinking."

Wheeler attacked the Administration's refusal to sell food to German-occupied countries, and declared it absurd to call the American foreign policy a "good-neighbor policy."

"It is apparently a policy based upon insults, name calling and disregard of international law and practices," he said. "It's one achievement has been to lead us to the brink of war . . .

"I venture the assertion that only Canada will be our friend if our diplomats keep insulting and starving those who do not take orders."

Edwin S. Hege, 'Chevy Chase Mayor,' Dies

Edwin S. Hege, 62, chairman of local Selective Service Board No. 3 and prominent in the civic life of the Chevy Chase area of Washington for many years, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital after a long illness.

Mr. Hege was born in Chambersburg, Pa., and moved to Rockville, Md., with his parents when a child.

In 1918 he was appointed District manager of the United States Housing Corporation. For his civic activities in the Chevy Chase area of the District, Mr. Hege became known as "the Mayor of Chevy Csase." His home was at 3822 Livingston Street Northwest.

He helped found and was a past president of the Kalorama Citizens Association, and for several terms was president of the Chevy Chase (D. C.) Citizens Association. Paul Block, Newspaper Owner, Dies

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—Paul Block, 63, one-time advertising solicitor who became a leading American chain newspaper publisher, died today in his Waldorf-Astoria Tower Apartment. He had been ill several months.

President of Paul Block and Associates, national advertising representatives for 16 newspapers, Block at his death also was publisher of the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Post-Gazette, the Toledo (Ohio) Blade and the Toledo Times.

In a 25-year career as publisher, begun in 1916 after he already had won wide success in the advertising field, Mr. Block headed numerous other papers at various times. These included the New York Evening Mail, Newark Star-Eagle, Brooklyn Standard-Union, Los Angeles Express, Detroit Journal, Duluth Herald and News Tribune, Memphis News-Scimitar, Lancaster (Pa.) New Era and the Milwaukee Sentinel.

Besides his newspaper activities, Block took an active part in political affairs and was a close personal friend of former Mayor James J. Walker, of New York City. In 1932 during the Hofstadter committee investigation of municipal government, Mayor Walker gave testimony acknowledging he had realized between 1927 and 1929 $246,692 profit without investment from a brokerage account with Block.

The publisher later testified, "He was my friend, Jimmy Walker, and not the mayor, to me."

Block, a critic of the New Deal, strongly supported Republican candidate Alfred M. Landon in the 1936 Presidential campaign and urged renomination of Herbert Hoover at the 1940 Republican convention. He many times expressed belief that the Roosevelt Administration was delaying business recovery.

Block was born in Elmira, N. Y. He entered the nawspaper field as an advertising solicitor for the Elmira Sunday Telegram in 1893, and organized his first New York firm, Paul Block, Inc., in 1897. For several years he was the advertising director of Pictorial Review magazine. He also once owned the Newark Bears' baseball club.

Block's philanthropic activities were numerous. His newspapers aided many charities and the publisher himself gave a $100,000 chapel to the Hotchkiss School at Lakesville, Conn., and in 1930 endowed the Paul Block Foundation, a public lecture course at Yale University, to trace the relation of the newspaper to contemporary affairs.

Surviving are his wife, the former Dina Wallach, of New York; their two sons, Paul, Jr., and William Karl; a brother, Max, active with him in the publishing field, and three sisters, Miss Mollie Block and Mrs. Gerson K. Liveright, both of New York, and Mrs. Gilbert Falk, of South Orange, N. J.

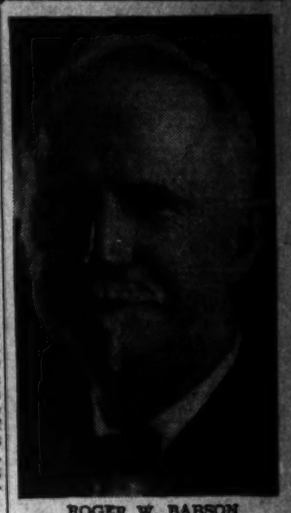
Funeral services will be held Tuesday in Temple Emanu-El here. Burial will be private.

Wars and Geography

By Roger W. Babson

Inevitable Character of Change

Not many hundred years ago England was divided into little principalities. Each had its own army, castle and cathedral. All went well while the battering ram was the heaviest implement of warfare. Until the warfare use of powder was invented, evey little principality made its own war materials. Only a few were able to make cannons, guns, shot, and powder. Hence, these principalities were forced to combine into what is now England.



ROGER W. BABSON

It was not because one principality was braver than another; but it was a question of geography and other uncontrollable factors. Uncontrollable factors likewise explain why today in New York the British pound sterling notes sell around $2.00 and British Government bonds sell in the 30's.

Peace reigned again for two hundred years more until the use of steam was applied to war vessels. Sailing battle frigates had required no bases and used no coal or oil. Small nations of sea-faring people, properly located, even had certain advantages. When, however, the era of steam came, the situation again changed. Holland and Spain became secondary powers, while England with its vast supplies of coal and iron forged ahead. This again changed the map of the world. It was not a question of courage; but of geography and other uncontrollable factors.

The same general principle applies to the Western Hemisphere. The United States and Canada are natural allies and should continue to work together. Some day the United States and Canada may be obliged to take over Mexico, the West Indies and the Latin American countries bordering the Caribbean. Whether or not the United States and Canada will be in a position to dictate to the Argentine Republic, Brazil and Chile is another matter. However, this is something that will be determined solely by geography and natural resources.

Of course, geography and natural resources are not everything. The character of the people is of great importance. History shows that the nations which forged ahead were motivated by a religion which taught "rewards and punishments." All combined to develop ruling classes which won their power through struggle supplemented by native intelligence, physical strength and indomitable courage. All went well for awhile; but as their successors came into power it was the same story, "where wealth accumulates men decay."

Although we hate to admit it, this same problem is involved in World War II. The democracies have become soft. Their rulers are no longer men who secure power through ability; but rather are politicians winning votes by deceiving people, encouraging laziness, and offering false security. The Nazi gang—however bad they are—do believe in the survival of the fittest and certain Old Testament doctrines which we have discarded. America is still young and can run on its momentum for some time. Hence, although the character problem may not be a factor in our present conflict; it will be all-important some day.

World War I had no reason for starting in 1914 and it settled nothing. With World War II, however, the situation is very different. Today the bombing plane and tanks bear the same relation to history as did the original use of powder in warfare and the use of steam in ships of war. National boundary lines, existing before the development of modern air warfare, cannot be expected to hold.

Winston Churchill knew this before Hess's arrival. After the war there will be consolidations of European nations. Hitler has already sold this idea to France and the Balkan States. To what extent this centralized power can be extended beyond the confines of Continental Europe, no one now knows!

I am glad we saved England in 1918 and I am 100 per cent for saving her again; but not necessarily to keep the status quo. Some readjustment of boundaries and world powers is inevitable. The result, however, will not depend upon bravery, nor money, nor population; but upon geography. England and Germany must, for geograhical reasons, ultimately join forces. Some day—in case of a conflict between Europe and America—we may have to fight the English whom we are now saving. It is well for us to mix a certain amount of realism with our idealism. This is why I disbelieve in the "Union Now" program for making one nation of America and England.

Another optimistic feature of the present world conflict is our policy of backing both England and China. Thereby we are bound to win something which should in the end pay us for our sacrifices. I say this because military strategists—contrary to popular opinion—believe that finally both England and Japan will win or else both will lose. The similar geograpical features make this certain.

If the United States were backing both England and Japan, we would then have something to worry about. Then we would win all or lose all. Now, however, we are playing safe because to the extent Germany may possibly win, Japan must necessarily lose. No one can now determine whether, after World War II, the United States will turn for trade and investments easterly to Europe or westerly to Asia; but by backing both England and China, we are sure of one of these great potential continents. Also remember: Although Germany can cut England's "lifeline," Germany has not shown how she can protect her own life lines as they are extended.

Yes,—let's contribute our best to helping the democracies—but let us not weaken ourselves with worry. We will not let Britain be beaten. Yes, and Hitler will be punished. God is still ruling in His heavens. Some changes and readjustments may, however, be for the best. This could apply to the Mediterranean Sea and Northern Africa,—who knows? There may be a wise "happy medium" between Lindbergh's defeatism and the warmonger's propaganda! So let's cheer up!

2 More Slain Here; Taxicab Driver Robbed

As police yesterday ran out new leads in the Strieff murder case and frantically searched for new angles to check, two new murders were reported, and, police believed, promptly solved.

Dead are Gertrude Evans, 35, colored, of 1848 Fifth Street Northwest, and George Williams, colored, 38, of 1328 Sixth Street Northwest.

Inquests in both deaths will be held today at 11:30 a. m., at the District Morgue.

Police are holding George Wilson, colored, 37, of 1848 Fifth Street Northwest, who, they said, gave himself up and confessed to the fatal shooting of Mrs. Evans. Members of the homicide squad said Mrs. Evans went to the second floor of the apartment house where she lives and knocked on Wilson's door. Wilson answered the door and "some words were passed between them," police said. Husband of the woman, James W. Evans, persuaded his wife to return to their apartment.

Wilson, police said, followed the couple downstairs and shot Mrs. Evans four times. The fatal shooting occurred late Saturday night. Wilson gave himself up at 1:30 a. m. yesterday.

At 2 a. m. yesterday, during an altercation in the front yard of 1328 Sixth Street Northwest, George Williams was stabbed by his wife, Catherine, 28, colored, according to police. She was arrested by Pvts. E. H. Winter and G. H. Hoffman of the Second Precinct and is being held for action of the coroner.

A taxicab driver reported to police yesterday a couple of fares he picked up at Bank and M Streets Northwest robbed him at gun point of $16.20 after making him drive out along Canal Road. The bandits then let the air out of his tires and were picked up by another car which had been driven up behind the taxicab and whose lights had been blinked two or three times. The cab driver was Douglas M. Ring, 40, of 624 Rock Creek Church Road Northwest.

Police also reported an assault and robbery by two white soldiers who accosted Francisco Fabres, a visitor here from New York City, near the Washington Monument. Fabres was robbed of $8 and, according to police, required treatment at Providence Hospital for cuts about the face. The injured man was registered at the Ambassador Hotel.

Chinese Aide Dedicates Club at Church

Col. Teh-Chuan Kuo, Chinese military attache in Washington, told the Young People of the Chinese Community Church last night that they must "face responsibilities to build a better America and a better Chinese community." The officer was speaking at the dedication of a new clubroom of the church at 1011 L Street Northwest, where Dr. C. C. Hung officiated.

In congratulating the Chinese youths on the clubroom, Col. Kuo stressed the importance of good environment.

The boys, ranging in age from 16 to 25 years, donated a third of the cost to build the clubroom. The Chinese Community Church contributed the rest.

With its new facilities, the young men's group is now arranging for a series of Sunday evening discussions. The clubroom, which was formerly a barn, is amply furnished for group meetings. It is also equipped with ping pong tables, a radio, victrola and other recreational facilities.

Nye Baffled By Russo-Nazi War Outbreak

Minneapolis, June 22 (INS).—"The beginning of the Russian-German hostilities adds to the proof that you can't tell from one day to the next who is fighting whom in Europe," Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, said here tonight.

He declined to comment further on the latest development in the war, and did not mention the Russo-German conflict in an earlier formal address to more than 3,000 persons of Scandinavian origin at the annual Svithiod picnic.

"If democracy is to win a victory it will be only because America keeps out of today's wars and makes herself strong enough to meet the worst that might come out of Europe's war," he said in his address.

Nye declared that President Roosevelt's "four freedoms" speech was "either campaign oratory or stark madness," and said "there is no such thing as freedom of the seas in time of war."

World Breakdown Is Laid to Lack Of Christianity

The breakdown in the world today is due primarily to the lack of Christianity, the Rev. H. W. Burgan told Hamline Methodist Church worshipers yesterday morning as he began his eleventh year as pastor.

Defining Christianity as "a spiritual stream of life beginning 2,000 years ago in Christ and flowing down the years," Dr. Burgan said that Hitler is not the cause of all our troubles.

"He is the result and not the cause of our problems. For this is an age when the essentials of Christian living are lacking," he said.

Dr. Burgan urged a "persistent and passoinate belief in God, exaltation of the individual, and belief in immortality" as guarantees of the survival of Christianity.

Back in 1918, in a Red Cross canteen at Dijon, France, a Washington woman endeared herself to the hearts of innumerable members of the A. E. F. by her many helpful activities in their behalf. It got so that everyone called her "Mother." And from that day to this she's still known as Mother Steed. Her real name is Mrs. Emma C. Steed, but no one uses it.

Well past the three-score and ten mark now, she's still at her job of cheering up Uncle Sam's fighting forces—a job at which, from all reports, she has an inimitable knack. For she's the hostesses at Washington's Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club. And in that capacity, she's finding lots to do these days.

Mother Steed has all sorts of stories to tell and, naturally, from her wide experience, a lot of sound advice to give on what's to be done to keep our fighting men cheerful. And so tonight she's going to be the guest of honor on "Your Town and Ours" over WJSV at 6:30 to have her say.

This will be the finale for the 13-program series which has been sent throughout the Nation over the Columbia network by WJSV, giving the inside story of what Washington really is like. It's appropriate that a sight-seeing trip should be included. That trip will be aboard the Goodyear blimp, where by short-wave Gunnar Back will interview its pilot, Commander Karl Lang, as well as tell what there is to see in Washington.

Contract Bridge

Consider the pickle S. S. was in on today's hand, playing a contract of two clubs, redoubled, against the enemy's six trumps. He was as surprised as any one at the table when he made the bid. Here is his letter describing the play:

"Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ A K 3 ♡ 10 9 8 5 4 ♢ A Q J ♣ K 3

WEST: ♠ Q 10 5 2 ♡ J ♢ 4 5 ♣ A J 10 9 4 3

EAST: ♠ 9 8 7 4 ♡ K 7 6 2 ♢ K 7 6 2 ♣ 5

SOUTH: ♠ J 6 ♡ A Q 3 ♢ 10 9 3 3 ♣ Q 8 7 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Dble
Redble	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ♡ J.

"Interesting hands continue to turn up in the noisy games on the Westport-New York smoker. Here is the latest one to give a kick to both sides, but of different kinds: With Fred Martin, my favorite partner, sitting North, I found myself at two clubs redoubled with the South cards.

"I admit the lightness of my club bid but the hand seemed strong enough for a positive response and the redouble looked like the best chance for a cheap game.

"The discovery that we had only six trumps between us was disturbing, and I was horrified to find the distribution against me.

"The lead of the heart jack I took with the queen, when East followed small. West went in with his ace of trumps on the next play of a low club to dummy. A lead through the ace, queen of diamonds was taken by the kind on my right, and when a low heart was returned, I had to guess the singleton and duck. The doubler trumped low and used another diamond to exit. A third round of diamonds was ruffed by the doubler, who then led a low spade. A finesse could not be risked, but a heart lead forced the doubler to trump again; and when he once more led spades, I took the king in dummy, cashed the club king, trumped the spade loser, dropped West's last trump with my queen, and made the contract with the 10 of diamonds. A good result at duplicate!"

Declarer lost one diamond and four clubs, winning eight tricks for his two-club contract.

Harrison Was Roosevelt's Trusted Aide, Wheel Horse in Defense Program

First Stricken While Working For Lease Bill

Senator Pat Harrison, who died yesterday, was first stricken in the spring when the President was counting heavily on his aid in directing lend-lease and defense legislation then moving into Congress.

He was among the first Senators consulted at the White House on aid-to-Britain moves, and participated in the first midnight conference on the bill.

Despite counsel of his friends, he worked night and day and was lured away from the Capitol only on advice that he needed "a brief rest." Impatient to get back, he kept in constant contact with developments through his wide Senate following.

Differs With President

Harrison's only serious difference with the President came on the undivided profits tax bill, later repealed under Harrison's leadership. Roosevelt allowed the repealer to become law without signing it.

He had cause for a grudge when the President espoused Barkley for Senate leader over Harrsion, but he refused to let that impair his loyalty. He worked side-by-side with Senator Byrnes for the President's third-term nomination at Chicago. All differences were forgotten when the President at the start of this session included him in the select Senate circle intimately consulted at the White House.

It was at the instance of his friend Senator Byrnes that he stood for election as President pro tem of the Senate after Senator Pittman's death. He had the President's blessing, but his Senate popularity was such that open opposition could not have prevented his election. It was unanimous.

Part of "Triumvirate"

So active a role did he play when this defense session opened, that Majority Leader Barkley, Senator Byrnes and Senator Harrison were frequently referred to as the leadership "triumvirate."

As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, taxes always were his first concern and he had hoped to direct the Administration's $3,500,000,000 defense tax bill through the Senate.

Senator George, ranking member of his committee, was personally charged by Harrison to look after preliminary work on the tax bill while he was ill, with the understanding that he would be back to do the heavy work. So convinced was he that he would be able to return in full vigor, that opening work on the bill in the House was delayed pending his progress.

He was ranking member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

As evidence of the Mississippian's popularity, upward of 2,000 persons, including Cabinet members, Vice President Henry A. Wallace, Senators and scores of folks from "back home" swarmed into the Carlton Hotel in Washington last February 9 to attend a reception celebrating Harrison's 30 years in Congress.

Those familiar with the Washington scene said it was the largest reception of its kind ever held there.

Willing to "Pinch Hit"

He was always willing to play the role of "pinch hitter" when legislation became ensnared. He liked the baseball term, for it reminded him of his early days when he played small league baseball on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

A report was current in 1935 that he might become the head of organized baseball. Denying an offer had been made, Harrison commented:

"I've been in politics so long I would be like a fish out of water away from it."

Christened Byron Patton Harrison, he simplified the name to "Pat Harrison" when he first entered politics and was elected district attorney in his Gulf Coast district at the age of 29.

He entered Congress in 1910 as a Representative and went to the Senate in 1918.

He built a reputation as one of the ablest of give-and-take debaters.

Dubbed "the Gadfly"

When the Republicans were in power he was famous for his satirical attacks on that party. Republicans dubbed him the "Democratic Gadfly."

Yet his irony in debate never left scars and he had many friends among the Republicans. Despite his unceasing salvos against his favorite target, the Republican tariff politics, the Smoots and others who sat across the aisle admired him.

President Warren G. Harding once described him as the "chief party troublemaker in the Senate."

Yet President Harding wrote Harrison a friendly letter after the Mississippian once made a pleasing reference to the President's father who had attended a Confederate reunion in New Orleans.

When Roosevelt became President, Harrison assumed part of the Senate leadership. Tax legislation, social security, tariff problems took most of his time. He worked indefatigably for the Hull reciprocal trade agreements program.

His work as floor leader for a measure was always interesting to watch. He did little speech-making.

Most of the time he traded, pacified, flattered. Reporters liked to watch the tall, stooped Harrison ambling about on the floor or heading for the Senate cloak room to nurse along a doubtful member—ever on the move, buttonholing one Senator, getting reports from another.

Kept Strategy Under Cover

Only a few knew his strategy. He once told a reporter who asked a leading question on the next step toward passage of a bill:

"Did you ever hear of a general telling the enemy where he was going to move his troops the next day? They might all get killed."

A favorite ally of Harrison in legislative battles, Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, came to Harrison for advice when he became a member of the Senate in 1931.

As the two worked hand in hand on legislation, Harrison's nickname was changed from "Gadfly" to the "Mississippi Fox."

Senator Byrnes was appointed to the United States Supreme Court June 12.

Generally regarded as a member of the "economy bloc" in Congress, Harrison frequently disagreed with President Roosevelt, but disagreements never interfered with the warmth of their friendship.

He preached against "Government waste" and opposed some of the Administration's fiscal policies.

In later years he reconciled some of his views on Government expenditures because of what he regarded as the humanitarian aspects of some Roosevelt proposals.

Bilbo Feud Recalled

In Mississippi politics Harrison's long feud with Senator Theo G. Bilbo always was a topic of conversation.

They had fallen out over Harrison's indorsement of Judge Edwin R. Holmes, of Yazoo City, for membership on the United States Court of Appeals.

Judge Holmes was promoted over Bilbo's opposition, the junior Senator having resented a contempt of court jail sentence Holmes once imposed on him.

For about four years the two Mississippi Senators did not speak.

Then one day in 1940 they happened to enter a Senate elevator at the same time.

Harrison, realizing, he said, that their feud was not to the best interest of the State, remarked:

"How are you, Senator?"

Bilbo said he was fine and wanted to know about Harrison's health.

From that time on, the two seemed to be getting along better every day.

Bilbo's vote had previously furnished the one-vote margin by which Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, had defeated Harrison for the majority leadership of the Senate after the death of the late Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas. Bilbo, in 1940, cast his vote for Harrison for President pro tempore of the Senate.

Showed No Bitterness

Harrison showed no bitterness toward Majority Leader Barkley after his 28-to-37 defeat and leaned over backward to support the Kentuckian in legislative battles.

The Administration coolness toward Harrison because of his differences of opinion on fiscal matters eventually dissipated and the White House frequently turned to him for leadership of its proposals.

In Washington Harrison lived quietly with his wife. Continuously besieged with social invitations, he eschewed them in favor of the more intimate companionship of close friends. Much of his off time, until later years, was spent on the Burning Tree Country Club golf course.

In national politics Harrison served as temporary chairman of the tumultuous Democratic National Convention at Madison Square Garden, New York, in 1924.

Born in Crystal Springs, Miss., August 29, 1881, the son of Robert and Myra Patton Harrison, he was forced to go to work early because of the death of his father, a Confederate veteran.

Selling newspapers as a boy, he managed to be graduated from the Crystal Springs High School, and with a "stake" he got playing semi-professional baseball, he entered the Louisiana State University. There at Baton Rouge, he waited on the mess hall table to help pay his way.

After graduation, he became a school teacher and studied law at night. Two years later he was elected principal of the school at Leakesville. He also opened a law office there.

In 1905 he married Mary Edwina McInnis, of Leakesville. They moved to Gulfport in 1906. Three children were born to them. He was a member of the Methodist Church.

Leaders Mourn Harrison's Death; Career Eulogized

Expressions of regret over the death yesterday of Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, were numerous and included the following:

President Roosevelt, who stated in part: He will be sadly missed in this hour of grave emergency."

Secretary of State Hull: "It was my privilege and honor to have been his colleague and to have considered myself his close personal friend for over 30 years. Senator Pat Harrison was a statesman of unexcelled ability and judgment and was the personification of loyalty to principles and to friends. He devoted his entire life unstintedly and unselfishly to the welfare of his country and the entire Nation will mourn the passing of one of its most useful and finest citizens."

Former President Hoover: "The Senator has been a great public official. He and I didn't agree on some things, but the Senator was always helpful and always constructive. He was everything a United States Senator should be."

James A. Farley: "His death removes from the Senate of the United States a great American at a time when the country can ill afford to lose his services and advice."

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York: "Senator Harrison attained a rank of leadership foremost among the public men of our time. . . . His life and work symbolize the opportunity, the strength and ideals of our common heritage."

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia: Senator Harrison's passing removed "one of the ablest and most useful men in public life at a time when his mature judgment and fine qualities of leadership are so much needed."

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi: "In the passing of Senator Pat Harrison there has been removed from the council and affairs of the Nation one of Democracy's most eloquent, experienced and influential leaders. He possessed such a happy, congenial and striking personality that he was never defeated for office at the hands of his people who knew him best and loved him most."

"He rose from the ranks, starting his career as a newsboy in Crystal Springs, Miss., many years ago. He was known and loved by the millions throughout the Nation. The loss of his counsel and leadership is indeed great and is keenly felt by the Nation coming in this tragic time of the Nation's life. His millions of friends join in deepest sympathy to his beloved family."

Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt: "Senator Harrison's long and ever-continuing fight for the betterment of the Nation has been invaluable."

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia: "Ithink his death is a great disaster to the Senate and the country at large."

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard: "Pat Harrison was a statesman and hs long public career stands as a monument. His place will be hard to fill."

Representative Wall Doxey (Democrat), of Mississippi: "The death of Senator Harrison is an irreplaceable loss to his State and Nation. He, truly, was a great man."

Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi: "Senator Harrison's passing is a great loss to the Nation and one of the greatest blows the people of Mississippi have had in many a day. He cannot be replaced."

Trusted by Colleagues

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia: "He was beloved and trusted by all his colleagues. His ability, patriotism and sincerity gave him a most commanding position in the public life. Our Republic will miss him and his host of friends will deeply mourn his passing."

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, wired from his home at St. Ignace, Mich.: "To me the passing of Pat Harrison is a matter of personal bereavement. There was no man in the Senate in whom I had greater confidence. His devotion to his family, his State and his Nation is a matter of record. I join with the countless thousands of friends and admirers in expressing to his widow and family and his people—the good citizens of Mississippi—the deepest expressions of sympathy from myself and Mrs. Brown."

Representative Ross A. Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi: "This able and lovable gentleman had character—you could count on him. He will be remembered and missed for many years to come."

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee: "I was shocked and grieved over the death of my close personal friend of 30 years. He was the prince of good fellows. It will be difficult to fill his place."

Representative Lane Ford (Democrat), of Mississippi: "The untimely passing of Senator Harrison is a tragedy to his State and Nation. It is a loss which Mississippi will be unable to replace."

Churches Must Demand Lead In Framing Peace, Says Rabbi

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., June 22.—Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation, said tonight that churches of the Nation, by their support of Government in time of crisis, are given the privilege and duty of helping frame the peace that will follow war.

"We have the right," he said, speaking at a University of Virginia vesper service preliminary to the opening of the Fifteenth Institute of Public Affairs tomorrow night, "to ask our Government and all governments with which we are or might be associated: What kind of a world do you propose? What greater good shall be achieved for all men after this bloody sacrifice? What are your aims?

"The friends of Hell will laugh a raucous laugh if, when the battle's won, the masses who have borne the brunt of battle still wear a crown of thorns," he added.

"While it is the work of specialists to define frontiers, to work out economic and political arrangements, it is the role of the church and synagogue to speak for the stricken millions among the nations. This war must win for individuals the privilege to work and live and laugh and love."

Rabbi Lazaron spoke under the auspices of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. He is a member of the executive board of the conference.

Tomorrow night, at the opening session of the institute, Gov. James H. Price and Prof. Hardy Cross Dillard, director of the institute, will make brief addresses of welcome. Maj. George Fielding Eliot, military analyst, will speak on naval affairs.

Discussions of the institute, centering on the theme, "The United States, the War, and the Future," will begin Tuesday morning and will be continued morning and afternoon through July 4.

Rabbi Lazaron said religion wanted "a peace and a world which respects the sanctity of individual and nation, and which creates instrumentalities to maintain that respect."

Religion seeks, he continued, that kind of a world not only for "ourselves, but for the Germans and Italians and Russians, too, which offers to the individual civil and political rights without regard to race, creed or color; economic security, that is, removal of the threat of unemployment; an increasing measure of leisure and education and opportunity for their enjoyment; freedom of conscience and religion."
